2 Cor. 6. 8. As Deceivers, and yet true.

Printed in the Year 1669.

To the Readers.

THe Author of the Friendly Debate having smitten us on the face, both on the right cheek and on the left; lest our deep silence be brought in evidence to proclaim our guiltiness, and so having lost our Livings, we should lose our good Names also, which ought to be dearer to us than our very Lives, It may seem high time to Apologize for ourselves, and to make it appear to the World, that we are not so black and ugly as we are painted, nor so bad as we are represented. Our Apology shall be that of the blessed Apostle St. Paul, a little alter'd, (against whom also they brought many and grievous Accusations, which they were not able to prove) They have not found us in the Temples (or Churches) disputing with any man: neither raising up the people, neither in the Synagogues, (or places of Convention for Religious Exercises) or in the City; neither can they prove the things whereof they accuse us. But this many of us confess, That after the way that they call Schism and Phanaticism, so worship we the God of our Fathers; believing all things that are written in the Old and New Testament, and in the Articles of Religion of the Church of England, so far as concerns the Doctrine of Faith and Sacraments. And are still ready to subscribe to all that the Learned and Famous Mr. Chillingworth saith was meant by Subscription; namely, That we are perswaded that the constant Doctrine of the Church of England is so pure and Orthodox, that whosoever believes it, and lives according to it, shall be saved; and that there is no Error in it, which may necessitate any man to disturb the peace, or renounce the communion of it. Now this being our Judgment, I humbly conceive we are acquitted from Schism in the Opinion of Mr. Chillingworth, and ought to be so in the Judgement of that learned and judicious Bishop Saunderson, who (as I have been credibly informed) being asked what he thought of the Subscription before mentioned, said, (after he had read it and considered it) I never subscribed in any other sense myself. And that this Subscription might suffice in Equity and Conscience (if the Supreme Authority should think fit) my Lord Chancellor Bacon hath declared in his Considerations about Ecclesiastical Affairs, tendred unto King James: His words are these, — For Subscription, it seemeth to be in the nature of a Confession, and therefore more proper to bind in the Unity of Faith; and to be urged rather for Articles of Doctrine, than for Rites and Ceremonies, and points of outward Government: for howsoever politick Considerations and Reasons of State, may require Uniformity, mity, yet Christian and Divine Grounds look chiefly upon Unity. It is the Duty of all Christians to be zealous, and to contend earnestly for the Unity of Faith, and to labour with all their might with themselves and one another, for unity of affections: Luther's Motto becomes every good Christian, In quo aliquid Christi video illum diligo. That the most considerable Nonconformists are Sons of Peace, and not Sons of the Coal, may hence be argued, That those who were Joynt-Commissioners for the Reformation of the Liturgy, became humble and earnest Petitioners to their Fellow-Commissioners the Bishops, and others their Assistants, for peace. That we are not generally such Bontefeu's and Incendiaries as we are charged to be, may in part appear in this, That we published no Answer for so long a time to two such angry and provoking Pieces as these: And that little which is here done by way of Reflection, is with so great moderation: Doubtless if we had been utterly unable to have answered the Reason or Logick of these two Books, we could not have easily failed of abundantly requiting the Author of them with Stories and Recriminations.

To the Readers.

Were all the Irregularities and Impieties of Men of our own Coat, though Canonical, reckoned up, and should we give our selves leave to look back thirty or forty years for matter of Accusation, (as the Author of the Friendly De- bate sometimes doth) we might fill whole Volumes with Errata's, and might occasion the common Enemy of our Religion, to triumph over, and the common People to trample upon the English Ministry. Had the Author we deal withal, had like Charity with Constantine the Great, or with King Charles the First, of blessed memory; he would rather have buried in silence the faults of the Ministry, than to have exposed them, whether real or imaginary; to the Eye of the World, to be beheld through a Multiplying and a Magnifying-glass, as he doth. Yea, had he not come short of Mr. White, the Centurist, in his Charity, he might have learnt of him not to have published a Second Part to blaze abroad the faults of his Brethren; there being now no War to inflame him, no Adversary by any Reply to provoke him: The Non-conformists now outed, being down on the ground, down in the mire, (and yet perhaps neither so dirty, or so much sullyed, as were some formerly Sequestred, there being neither Scandal, nor Insufficiency, so much as charged upon one of a thousand, as any Reason or Cause of their Ejection.) Had he used the like Candour towards the Non-conformists that Dr. Moulin doth towards the Romanists; and which I believe he expects from us towards his own Party; he would never have charged the faults and errors of a part upon the whole, of a few upon all, a very few excepted; and so doing, he

he might have spared wholly his Continuation, and have much abridged his first Dialogue. He needed not to have made so many blazes as he doth, by so often firing men of straw of his own making; nor so great a noise in the world, by discharging so many great Guns, against Castles in the Air of his own building.

But since he advanceth Reason so much in word, upon all occasion, we may wonder he hath made no more real use of it in his Discourse. For say we might (and think we can justify it) that his Words are more than his Matter, his Rhetorick far beyond his Logick; and therefore we choose rather that he should smite us with his Fist, than with the Palms of his Hands; I mean with his Logick, rather than with his Rhetorick. What Reason or Logick is in such a Discourse as this? Mr. T. W. and Mr. W. B. have Printed such and such things, therefore all, or almost all the Non-conformists are so and so; or Preach and Print thus and thus; or else Mr. Lewis Hughes, Mr. Vicars, the two Mr. Bridges, say or write thus; Ergo, this is the Way, the Spirit, and the Language of the whole Party. Or one or two in a Kingdom, or in the three Kingdoms, and that too, when the Kingdoms were all in a flame with the Civil War, were hot and fiery, &c. Ergo (now notwithstanding that there has been nine years peace, an Act of Indempnity and Oblivion passed, the generality of men formerly divided, quiet and quietly disposed, uniting, cementing and soldering together, co-operating for the peace, settlement, and welfare of the whole (a few Clergy-men excepted) all that were sometimes of the one Side or Party, must be looked upon as Hotspurs, Incendiaries, very dangerous Persons, Enemies to Authority still, &c. must have the skins of wild Beasts put upon them, and a hideous noise and out-cry made after them, on purpose to stir up the People to hunt them down, or worry them; or else to move and provoke Authority to make and spread Nets and Toyles to take them: Would it not have been more rational and Christian, more Logical and Theological, for the Author to have argued thus; Mr. Baxter, Mr. Allen, Dr. Tuckney, Dr. Coxant, and many others now living, though Non-conformists, are good men, good Christians, good Subjects, good Preachers, good Writers; therefore we must not judge all our Brethren Inconformists, for the failings or miscarriages of a few? Or might not the Author of the Debate, if he had pleased; have argued much better and stronger, thus; Mr. Dod, Mr. Ball, Mr. Hildersham, Mr. Rathband, Mr. Gere, and many others of the old Non-conformists, were meek and moderate, serious and sober, zealous against Separation; therefore it hath not been the way and Spirit of Non-conformists to be turbulent, movers of Sedition in the State,

To the Readers.

State, or makers of Rents and Schisms in the Church? Or thus: Mr. Love and Mr. Gibbons laid down their Lives for their Loyalty, and Mr. Cawton was indicted of High-Treason for praying for his Majesty that now is: The London and Country Ministers declared zealously against all proceedings against the Crown and Life of King Charles the First, of Blessed Memory: Mr. Vines, Dr. Spurstow, Mr. Young, lost their Masterships at Cambridge, and others their places elsewhere, for refusing the Engagement. The Cheshire and Lancashire Ministers published a Book in Print against the Engagement, sided with Sir George Booth in his Undertaking for his Majesty. The Presbyterians generally throughout the Kingdom were cordial and zealous for his Majesties Just and Royal Title: Therefore they are good men, and good Subjects to his Majesty. Or if you will, thus: The Presbyterians and other Nonconformists have really lost their Livings, pretending to keep their Consciences, have been and still are generally either actively or passively obedient to the Laws; pray for, and seek the peace and happiness of the King and his Kingdoms; have in patience possessed their Souls above seven years together, and all this while have forbore, even in their private Meetings, all exasperating and provoking Language, or publickly in print, scurrilous Pamphlets or Libels against the Government, And have not (as the Author of the Debate hath) endeavour'd to prejudice a great part of his Majesties Subjects, by many Reproaches and Terms of distinction, contrary to his Majesties Royal Declaration, ordaining, That all Notes of Discord, Separation, and difference of Parties, be utterly abolished among his Subjects: Therefore Presbyterians and other Nonconformists, are men of Peace, Religion and Loyalty.

Forasmuch then as the Author of the Debate hath endeavoured with his Sparks of Wit and Fire, to inflame light-headed and hot-headed Persons, (if it be possible) to make a combustion, contrary to the Law of the Land, the Peace of our Sovereign Lord the King, and the great Law of Love and Peace, the Act of Oblivion; I would advise him to do Justice upon himself, in executing his own Books in the Flames, for being Incendiaries. The worst I wish him is his Reformation; that for the time to come, he may be more charitable and good-natur'd; or more Sanguine than now he is, and less Sanguinary than these his Books speak him to be.

Next to our desires to cure our Adversary, I hope we may have leave to go about to heal our selves; and this I shall endeavour to do, by pulling out the Weapons that have made the wound, and by imitating the practise of the Sympathetical Doctors, namely, by applying some Sovereign Balsam, or Healing-Plasters, to his two Wea-

To the Readers.

Weapons, his Sword and Dagger, or his Sword and Rapier, (call his two Books which you please) if by any means I may heal the wounds which they have made.

And though perhaps some others would never have scrupled to have answered these Pieces, Railery with Railery, or even Railing with Railing, and to have thrown that Dirt in his Face which he put into our hands; and to have laboured to quench his Wild-fire, though with dirty and stinking Billings-gate Kennel-Water: Yet this hath not been my design, but rather the contrary, to overcome him with good usage and good words; and because I cannot give him as good Language as he brings, therefore to study to give him better; however nothing so bad; to use hard Reasons, and soft Words; and herein to follow the Reverend and Judicious Hooker, rather than Martin Mar-Prelate.

As for the way and method I take in assaulting his two strong Holds or Forts, (which some think impregnable) namely, why I do not charge in a right Line, and rush directly upon the Pikes, the Noli me Tangere's of the Books; my answer is that of the Duke of Parma, upon occasion, I know very well what is fit for me to do, for the attaining my Ends, and am not come so far, to take counsel of my Enemy. Or as another Prince said, I will not take a burning Coal out of the fire with my bare Fingers, when I can do it better with a pair of Tongs.

Tongs. I add further, It doth not necessarily argue the want of a good Cause, or a good Courage, to come on the Flank or Reer of an Enemy as well as on the Front; or to seem sometimes to give Ground and Wheel-about, with a design to charge with the more advantage.

I shall not detain you much longer, Good Reader, in the Porch, being sensible of being so long already: May I crave your leave to make a brief Declaration, a short Petition, and to enter a reasonable Protestation.

I Declare, I do hold the Elders that Preach well, or Rule well, or Live well, by what names or titles soever dignified or distinguished, whether they be Archbishops, Bishops, Pastors or Curates; whether they be Conformists or Nonconformists, to be worthy of double honour. And that I had much rather we could meet each other half-way, to reconcile our Differences, and to give each other the right hand of Fellowship, than to try it out for Victory by these Pen and Paper Combates any longer; lest Atheism and Popery be advantaged by our dissensions, and enter in at our breaches. I would not have Ministers of either persuasion, be like the silly Coneys that continually fight and tear one another, without ever joyning to make resistance against the Polcat. I declare also, I do not, in, or by this Treatise, condemn Conformists, or commend Non-conformists as such; yet
I

To the Readers.

I cannot but own my utter dislike of the Principles and Practises of some high Conformists or Hectors for Conformity; namely, such as prefer the Romish Church, before the Reformed Transmarine Churches; Arminius before St. Austine; who judge Aerius a greater Heretick than Arrius; who have more charity for those that deny the Deity of our Saviour, than for those that scruple the strict jus divinum of Episcopacy; and who can with more Patience hear a Dispute against the very Being of a Deity, than about the taking away of a Ceremony; that profess themselves the chiefest Sons of the Church of England, and yet dissent from her Doctrine contained in the Articles, Homilies, and Liturgie; and transgress the Laws of the Church about Rites and Ceremonies, by going too far on the right hand, or running too far before them, and become Non-conformists themselves, and breakers of the Act of Uniformity, even by their extream Conformity. These, these are the Hectors, I mean, who when they have perswaded a man to strain hard to go a mile with them in Conformity, will compel him to go twaine; that are implacable Enemies to Non-conformists, though peaceable and Pious; and are no good Friends to Conformists, except under the same degree of Longitude and Latitude with themselves: Yea, I may say, that notwithstanding their pretended zeal and devotion to the Hierarchy, archy, look on former Archbishops, such as Grindal, Whitgift, Abbot, as Puritans, and would (if they could) Unbishop some of the present Bishops for Presbyterians.

To the Readers.

As for the Author of the Friendly Debate, I hope better things of him; and though he be a Champion for the Conformists cause, and I differ from him in many things; yet I must confess I do not look on him as one of the Hectors before described; but I say of him rather, Talis quàm sit utinam noster esset; For I am confident, that one of his parts, learning and stile, could easily make a Dialogue, wherein the high Conformists should appear as simple and ridiculous as he hath made the Non-conformists.

My Petition, my humble and hearty Petition is to the Fathers of the Church, the most Reverend the Archbishops, and the Right reverend the Bishops, and to the Sons of the Church, our Conforming Brethren, That they would manifest their love to Peace, by their condescensions and desires of Union, with their dissenting Brethren; and that there might be, by the means of the Governours of our Church, their Mediation with His Majesty and the Parliament, some such Laws made, as might for ever take away the differences 'twixt them and those that are for Moderation, that still hold themselves Members of the Church of England, though not admitted to be Teachers in it: And Oh!

To the Readers.

Oh! that it were in their hearts, as many of them as hold Communion with the Reformed Churches beyond Seas, to offer such Bill or Bills to King and Parliament, as might enable the Bishops to receive all again into the Bosom of the Church, and to the Exercise of their Ministry, who besides taking the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy to his Majesty, can conform to what is necessary in other Reformed Churches.

And my earnest desire to all Nonconformists is, That they love and follow the Truth and Peace; that they endeavour after Union and Coalition; however that they avoid Schism and Separation, truly so called: And especially that they keep far from that dividing Principle, To imagine a thing of it self indifferent, to be therefore unlawful, because commanded by a lawful Authority; and also from that grand Crime of the Donatists, that unchurched all besides themselves.

My Protestation is this, That whereas the Author of the Debate hath offered us Nonconformists many and great Affronts, hath made so many hard and desperate Thrusts or Passes at us, and hath thereby forced us at last to Draw in our own Defence; That if he shall presently cause our Persons or Weapons to be arrested or seized therefore, He may never more be proclaimed for a Courageous Champion, nor the Nonconformists posted for base Cowards.

If the High Sons of the Church have th: Liberty

berry and Priviledge to throw Ink in our Faces; the Sons of Adam, the Sons of Peace, and his Majesties good Subjects, may have we hope a Toleration or Connivence to wipe it off.

These things premised; Since the Author of the Debate hath so vehemently charged us, and put in a First and a Second Indictment against us, for Irreligion, Disloyalty, Schism, Sacrilege, &c. We plead, NOT GUILTY; And put our selves upon the Tryal of our Countrey, which be You.

An humble Apologie for Nonconformists, with modest and serious Reflections on the Friendly Debate, and Continuation thereof, &c.

Question.

WHAT Reason can be given, if there be no guilt in the Nonconformists, that no Answer was given to the Friendly Debate, for so long a time?

Ans. Bishop Bramhal, that learned Prelate, may be their Advocate in this Case; (I hope the Sons of the Church will not disdain to hearken to a Father of the Church) Those who have composed minds, free from distracting cares, and Means to maintain them, and Friends to assist them, and their Books and Notes about them; do little imagine with what difficulty poor Exiles struggle, whose minds are more intent on what they should eat to-morrow, than what they should write. Bishop Bramhal of Schism, pag. 275. Besides, if an Answer had stolen forth without License, would it not have been arrested for a seeming breach of a late Act about Printing; and the Author of it, according to the Divinity and Logick of the Friendly Debate,

pag. 3. concluded to be neither a good Subject, nor a good Christian? (vide Deb. pag. 2. Edit. 4.)

Quest. What Answer then can be made for printing this present Answer and Apology?

Ans. The Intens and Design of Laws, is the Conservation of the Publick Peace. The Law is Just, Uniform, and no Respector of Persons, whether Conformists, or Non-Conformists, but binds all to the Peace and Good Behaviour alike, doth not hold one Mans Hands, whilst Another cuts his Throat, or stabs him under the fifth Rib. If a Man be once and again violently assaulted, he may lawfully defend himself. The Author of the Debate hath smitten us on the one Cheek, and on the other also; hath reviled us, and with his Pen persecuted us, and said all manner of evil against us falsely. In this case, a dead and stupid silence, might argue we were verily guilty concerning the Crimes laid against us. If a man that is Charged, Indicted, and Arraigned, refuseth to plead, the Law adjudgeth him to be pressed to death. Our blessed Saviour himself Apologized for himself and his Disciples. So did Justin Martyr and Tertullian, for the Primitive Christians. The great and foul Blots which have been cast upon our Names by that Author, would not soon out, if no means or endeavors should be used to wipe them off.

Quest. But is every Transgression of a Humane Law, though but penal, so culpable or criminous as is pretended?

Ans.

Ans. I humbly conceive not. And there are thousands of good Subjects, and good Christians (many of them good Sons and Daughters of the Church of England) who did eat Flesh last Lent, or last Fryday, asking no Question for Conscience-sake, in reference to any penal Law or Statute in that Case; and who have not scrupled to bury their Dead in Linen, though contrary to a late Act of Parliament. And if you lay so great a Burthen upon every breach of a penal Statute, how shall the Carrier long keep his Cart on Wheels, or the Citizen long stand on his Legs for want of Trading, by reason of an Act of Parliament requiring the Tire of the Wheels to be four Inches wide, under the penalty of forty Shillings for each offence?

Quest. Is it not therefore enough to satisfie the Law to pay the Mulct or Penalty required in such Cases? (Vide Contin. pag. 22.)

Ans. Mr. Perkins, famous both at Home and Abroad, for his great Piety and Learning, hath amongst his Cases of Conscience, this Case: Whether Students in Colledges, and Members of Corporations, are tied to observance of their Local Statutes, under pain of Perjury? In resolving whereof, he hath something useful, and pertinent to our purpose: He saith, That Statutes are of two sorts, Principal and Fundamental, or less principal; the first sort, belonging to the Being of the Society, are necessary to be kept under pain of Perjury: As to the less principal, namely, Statutes that are for Order and Decency, the Founder or Law-Maker exacts not Obedience simply, but either Obedience or the Penalty; because the Penalty is as much beneficial to the state of the Body, as the other, that is, as actual Obedience: And in this Case, he doth not charge the Breach of any Local Statute with the crime of Perjury. And Bishop Taylor, in his Rule of holy Living, Chap. 3. pag. 183. saith thus: As long as the Law is obligatory, so long our Obedience is due; and he that begins a contrary Custom without reason, sinneth: But he that breaks the Law when the Custom is entred and fixed, is excused; because 'tis supposed the Legislative Power consents, when by not punishing, it suffers Disobedience to grow up to a Custom. And I have formerly learnt it for good Divinity, That every meer or bare Omission to do a thing required by Law, is not a sin, (extra casum scandalis & contemptus) provided it be not done scandalously and contemptuously, or with offence to our weak Brother, and in contempt of the Magistrate.

Quest. What's all this to the Case of the present Nonconformists? Do not they scandalously and contemptuously break the Laws, in dwelling in and near London, and holding Religious Meetings, commonly called Conventicles? (Vide Debate, page 2.)

Ans. Many of them have taken the Oxford Oath, and are legally qualified to live in Corporations.

rations. Others cannot possibly live in the Countries, for want of a Livelihood. I have heard of a Reverend Minister, that going abroad to seek maintenance from well-disposed Christians, being benighted, lost his Way and his Life both, being through cold starved to death. Others perhaps will plead they cannot live peaceably in the Country: I heard one, and a principal one, say, He never looked towards the City, nor ever should, if he had not been driven out of the Country. The Law of Nature teaches the Hart, the Hare, and all Creatures that are pursued, to fly to the nearest and thickest Covert, or hiding place. I have heard Huntsmen talk of giving the Hare Law; I do not well understand Forrest Law: but I believe this is not meant by it, That she shall have no mercy if she seeks to hide or to save her self by flight from those that pursue her. There are also some amongst the Nonconformists, that think themselves bound to preach the Gospel; and though they will not intrude into Churches, which are at the Magistrates disposal, yet they look upon it as their Duty to preach in private Houses: And for that in London and other Cities, the multitude of those that desire to hear, are greater than in other places, and their Meetings here may be least taken notice of, therefore probably they repair to these places of concourse. And what Fowler had not rather shoot at a Flock, than at two or three single Birds?

And what Fisherman would not chuse rather to cast his Net into the main Sea, than into a small Brook? The Quarrel of Fimbria against Scevola, was, That he would not receive the Weapon of Death far enough into his Body; and the same is the Quarrel that some of our Brethren have against us, That there being such sharp Laws made against us, we are not willing to present our naked Breasts to the point of them, and let our Brethren gage us with their Weapons, but chuse rather to fly from Country to City, and from City to City, to hide our selves. Some there are, who can say they hold no Meetings contrary to Law. There are that hold some private Meetings, but first they and their Auditors go to Church, and hear Common-Prayer and Sermon there. Most of those that do otherwise may be supposed to be in and about London, where, by reason of the burning of above fourscore Parish Churches, the Churches that remain may not be capacious enough to receive or hold all the Inhabitants, and besides may possibly be at inconvenient distances from their present Habitations. If you say, That the Old Nonconformists, when they were silenc'd by the Bishops, forbore to preach, and justified their silence against the Brownists who accused them for it. To this, may be replied, That the number of Ejected Ministers formerly, were not comparable to what it is now; usually not one to one hundred, to what it is in our days. Besides, the People that are dissatisfied with the Liturgy or Ceremonies now, are ten, if not a hundred to one, to what they were formerly. What shall Ministers do in this Case? Our Saviour when he saw the multitudes, had compassion on them, because they were as Sheep without a Shepherd. Had you rather that Quakers and Romish Seducers should gather up Multitudes; and that Taverns, Alehouses, and worse places, should on the Lords day be filled with the number of those that absent themselves from the publick Assemblies, rather than that they should be tolerated to hear a Sermon of Faith and Repentance, and other Duties towards God, and of Loyalty to the King, of Love and Charity one towards another, in a private house? For my own part, I confess in this Case, I would much rather go learn what that means, The Harvest truly is great, and the Labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the Harvest, that he would send forth Labourers into his Harvest. Again, it is to be considered, that Mr. Dod, Mr. Hildersham, and others, were silenced formerly but in some Diocesses, and for some time; afterwards they got diverse times liberty to preach. Mr. Cotton had a License to preach, under the Broad Seal of England, procured by Bishop Williams, then Lord Keeper, notwithstanding his inconformity. Mr. Cartwright notwithstanding he had writ so much, and so sharply against Conformity, was suffered to preach, and enjoyed a place of Master of an Hospital at Warwick, to his dying day. Yea, Mr. Brown, the Father of the Brownists, if we believe the Historian, was suffered to keep a Living, and that no mean one, (Achurch in Northamptonshire) to his Death. The Bishops in those dayes, if they turned Men out of their Pulpits, let them have a Livelihood; either some way from their Livings, or else permitted them, or connived at least, at their teaching of School. My Schoolmaster at a Grammar-School, was one that had left a Living, rather than he would Conform. And 'tis storied of old Mr. John Fox, by Doctor Heylin, that though he refused to subscribe to any thing but the Greek Testament, yet he enjoyed his Prebends place in Salisbury till his dying day. 'Tis worthy our notice, that these mens Yoak was more easie than ours: And that notwithstanding they are thought to be of different Principles from the present Nonconformists, yet certain it is, that they held it lawful to preach and pray, and keep days of Humiliation in private Houses. And I was told by one Mr. W. That he never had any other Ordination but Prayers and Imposition of hands: by old Mr. Dod, and some other Ministers his Friends, in a private House.

Upon the consideration of the Premises, my hearts desire is, That the present Age may labour to imitate and surpass the Age past; the Right Reverend the Bishops, their Predecessors, in their Forbearance and Moderation ; and the Nonconformists theirs, in their Meekness and Peaceableness : That the Bishops would endeavour to be Reconcilers, and Repairers of our Breaches, and Restorers of our Pulpits to preach in ; and that the Nonconformists would desire nothing but what may become Sons of Peace, and such as earnestly long after Unity, and had much rather, as becomes Labourers, be admitted to work in the Vineyard, than to stand any longer idle in the Market-place : Or, as becomes Fishers of Men, to be casting their Nets on the right side of the Ship, than to sit any longer mending their Nets on the Shore. That so the Ages to come, when they shall read the History of this Generation, when we all (Conformists and Nonconformists) are laid down to rest quietly together in our Graves, may have no occasion to rise up and say, That whereas the late War had made its thousands of Separatists; Rigid Conformity had made its ten thousands ; And all this too, during the peaceable Reign of our most Gracious Sovereign, (a Son of Peace) CHARLES the Clement ; as he hath manifested himself, by his Royal Letters and Declaration from Breda, his Royal Declarations since, and his present Princely Clemency : And this too, notwithstanding great Animosities, Exasperations, and Irritations of some, on the one hand, out of an inordinate Zeal ; and many Weaknesses, Follies, and Provocations

of some on the other, for lack of Knowledge.

Quest. Are not the Non-conforming-Ministers, who hold Private Meetings, Schismatics, and Sectaries, and Breakers of the Peace and Unity of the Church? Vide Deb. p. 211.

Ans. 'Tis a sign of exasperation (saith my Lord Bacon, upon the like difference) to condemn the contrary part as a Sect; yea, and some indiscreet persons have been bold in open preaching, to use dishonourable and derogative speech and censure of the Churches abroad; and that so far, as that some of our Men (as I have heard) ordained in forraign Parts, have been pronounced to be no lawful Ministers. So he. And further, Let's remember (saith the same judicious Author) that the ancient and true Bonds of Unity, are, One Faith, one Baptism; and not, One Ceremony, one Policy: And endeavour to comprehend that saying, Differencia Rituum commendat unitatem Doctrinae; Christ's Coat was indeed without Seams, yet the Churches Garment was of divers Colours. The Presbyterian and Congregational Nonconformists do profess to agree in the main Doctrine with the Church of England, contained in her Articles of Religion, so as fully to embrace, and constantly to adhere unto what is purely Doctrinal in them. Besides, the Presbyterians do not separate from the Church, so as to set up Church against Church, Altar against Altar; but being thrust out of the Church themselves, and the number of men and women dissatisfied

satisfied about either some passages or Ceremonies in the Lyurgy, so that they dare not receive the Sacrament in the way required in the publick Assemblies, being very great; they take occasion to meet for Religious Exercises in private, for a time onely, till a door be opened for them in the Church, by the removal of some supposed or real Corruptions in the publick Worship. And the reason why some (whilst they continue in the City) do not frequent the Publick Assemblies, may be this; Because they are here by connivance onely, and dare not be seen openly to out-face a Law: But when they are in the Countrey, they joyn with the Congregation where they reside pro tempore, to shew their Union with the Church, and Conformity to the Laws. Nor are they therefore to be judged Schismatics, because they still hold internal Communion with all Christians, and so with the Church of England, with whom in some things they conceive they cannot communicate externally. And there is not (saith a Learned Bishop) so great Conformity to be expected in Ceremonies, as in the Essentials of Sacraments. The Separation of the N.C. from the Ch. of Engl. is not total, nor perpetual; and a man may remove from his Fathers House, it being infected, with a purpose to come thither when all is clear and well again. And their desire and prayer is still, That they that went forth of their Churches weeping (yet bearing

ing good Seed, viz. the Doctrine of Faith, Repentance, and Obedience to God, and his Vicegerent) may come again rejoicing, bringing their Sheaves (that is, their Congregations) with them.

Quest. But is not this partial and occasional withdrawing of some Non-conforming Ministers and people, from the publick Legal Assemblies, justly charged with Schism?

Answ. Hear what a Romish Doctor saith, which is cited by Bishop Bramhal, in his Treatise of Schism, pag. 7, 8. Whenthere is a mutual division of two parts or Members of the Mystical Body of the Church, one from the other, yet both retaining Communion with the Universal Church; (which for the most part springs from some doubtful Opinion, or less necessary part of Divine Worship) quam cunque partem amplexus fueris Schismaticus non audies, quippe quod Universa Ecclesia neutram damnarit; what side soever you take, you are not a Schismatick. &c.

Quest. Sith that divers of the Non-conforming Ministers had no Ordination but by their Brethren the Presbyters, Can they be esteemed lawful Ministers? Is such Ordination valid, without Re-Ordination by the Bishops?

Answ. Ordination by Presbyters without Bishops, was adjudged valid by our former Bishops; witness the Case of three Scottish Bishops, consecrated in England in King James his dayes:

Take

Take the History of it from Archbishop Spotswood, who relateth the matter and manner of it thus: A Question, saith he, was moved by Doctōr Andrews, Bishop of Ely, touching the Consecration of the Scottish Bishops, who as he said, must first be ordained Presbyters, as having received no Ordination by a Bishop; the Archbishop of Canterbury, Doctōr Bancroft, who was by, said, That thereof there was no necessity; seeing where Bishops could not be had; the Ordination of or by Presbyters, must be esteemed lawful: This applauded to by the other Bishops, Ely acquiesc'd; and at the day and place appointed, the three Bishops were consecrated. A. Spotsf. Hist. Book 7. p. 514. Dr. Field in his Book of the Church, holds the Ministers lawful Ministers in the Transmarine Churches, though ordained without Bishops; and Dr. Thorndike, in his Treatise relating to the Primitive Government of Churches, hath so much charity as not to unchurch the Reformed Churches beyond the Seas, who have no Bishops, pag. 202. The pious, learned, and famous Mr. Gataker, never had any Episcopal Ordination, but was ordained by Dr. Stern, Suffragan of Colchester. The Religious and Renowned Archbishop Usher, in his Reduction set forth by Dean Barnard, was of the Judgement, that the Chor-Episcopi, or Rural Deans, might lawfully Ordain: And this his Judgement was attested by Doctōr Holsworth, yea and very probably too, by Bishop Brownrig,
and

and others of the Sub-Committee for Ecclesiastical Affairs, in the beginning of the Long Parliament. The Attestation is as followeth: We are of the Judgment that the form of Government here proposed, is not in any point repugnant to the Scripture, and that the Suffragans mentioned in the second Proposition, may lawfully use both the power of Jurisdiction and Ordination, according to the Word of God, and the Practice of the Ancient Church.

Quest. But what great matter is it what the Modern Bishops or Doctors do or say in this Affair? Is it not sufficiently known that Aerius is reputed an Heretick for this Tenet, viz. For denying a superiority of Bishops above Presbyters? And was not Ordination by Presbyters condemned by a Council of the Ancient Church?

Ans. Aerius is counted an Heretick for other Opinions also, by Epiphanius, for which our Brethren that Conform will acquit him of Heresie. And the Reverend, Learned, and Laborious Dr. Stillingsfleet hath given several Reasons why those Ordinations might be lawfully made void by the Council, in case they had been performed by a Bishop; as because in another Bishops Diocess, because sine Titulo, &c.

Quest. If the Presbyterians can be freed from Schism, yet what can be said to clear them from the sin of Sacrilege, either as Principals or Accessories? Did not the Assembly put out Annotations tions on the Bible in those times, and for fear of displeasing their Masters, never meddle with condemning of Sacriledge?

Answ. I answer: The Notes commonly called the Assemblies Notes, came out before the Assembly was convened, and was none of their Act: And this is taken notice of, by some very considerable Persons in their Preface to the Reader before the Morning-Exercises, printed 1659. in these words: We have (not without some regret) observed that the Large English Annotations, in which but some few onely of the late Assembly, together with some others, had an hand, are generally ascribed unto the whole Assembly, and usually carry the Name of the Assemblies Annotations, as if done by the joynt Advice of that Grave and Learned Convention. Yet further, as to the places mentioned in the Debate, they were commented upon by the persons here mentioned: That of Rom. 2. 22. by Dr. Featly, an Episcopal Doctor, and a Reverend man, a great Sufferer for his Majesty in the late times: That of Ezek. by Dr. Richardson, Bishop of Ardagh in Ireland, a person of great Learning and worth; and that in Genesis by Mr. Leigh, who was Sub-Dean of Chester. As for the Assembly, when they sat and acted as an Assembly, even in those days, they did dare to condemn Simony and Sacriledge both, as Sins against the second Commandment; as you may read in the larger Catechism; and they cite those two Scriptures

tures for the proof thereof, Romans 2. 22. Malachy 3. 8.

And as these were their Principles against the Alienation of Church-Means, so they made it their business to preserve the Lands and Revenues of the Church from Spoil and Rapine. The Bishops Temporalties were engaged for great Sums of Money before ever the Assembly met, and I never heard that the Parliament advised with the Assembly about the sale of them. Yet this is certain, that the Tythes belonging to the Bishops were kept unsold, and reserved for the Churches use; and all the Dean and Chapters Lands left untouched, even by that Parliament, which (if ever any) was the Presbyterian Parliament, until their Members were seized on, secluded, imprisoned, and driven away by the Army. They were not Friends to the Hierarchy, if we believe Dr. Heylin in his Cyp. Angl. who designed the buying in of all Improprations; and if we credit Dr. Fuller, in fifty years they would have bought them all in. And in after times, when great Attempts were made to sell the Tythes and Glebe Lands, it was withstood zealously and effectually, for it was prevented, under God, chiefly by the means of the Presbyterians, and their Friends in the City and Country. To conclude, will you have Mr. Knox the Fore-man of the Presbyterians, his Judgment about Sacrilege: For John Knox, (as saith Archbishop (Archbishop Spotswood) 'tis clear by his Sermons and Writings still extant, that he held it a point of high Sacrilege to rob and spoyle the Church of Tythes.

Quest. Is it not very pride, self-conceitedness, humour, pcevishness, yea, and very obstinacy, that occasions their Non-conformity?

Ans. Some of the Nonconformists of old; and of late, have offered to purge themselves by Oath from so great Crimes in the Case. And others have in the Pulpit in their Farewel Sermons protested the contrary, and that it was meer Conscience of Duty, and fear of Sin, which caused their Inconformity.

Quest. Are the Nonconformists justly compared to the Pharises? (See Cont. p. 138.)

Ans. No: The Pharisees in our Saviours time were great Zealots and Sticklers for the Ceremonies of the Jewish Religion, and particularly for mens Traditions and Humane Inventions; were high Conformists themselves, men in Power and Place in the Church, and great Hatets and Persecutors of the Nonconformists of their times.

Quest. Can any man that is not either very simple, or very scrupulous, question any thing in the publick Worship, in the Liturgy, or Ceremonies? Is not the Liturgy so perfect, that nothing can be added to it, or taken from it?

Ans. It was not always so. Time was, and that but in the year 1644. when learned Mr. Chillingworth preaching before King Charles the First at Reading, used these words: At what time soever a Sinner doth repent him of his Sins from the bottom of his heart, I will put all his wickedness out of my remembrance, saith the Lord: saith thus: The plain truth (if you will hear it) is, The Lord hath not said so; these are not the very words of God, but the paraphrase of men; and (by reason of the mistake to which it is subject) I fear very often a pernicious paraphrase. The Right Reverend the Bishops have done very well to remove this stumbling block at the beginning of the Liturgy; O that they would go on to remove out of the way every thing that offends! That the Lessons out of the Apocrypha-Books might be either exchanged altogether for the Canonical Scripture, or at least reduced to that small number that was appointed in the late Scottish Liturgy, where were appointed onely two Chapters out of the Apocrypha, one out of Ecclesiasticus, the other out of the Book of Wisdom. That the new Translation of the Psalms might be read, as well as of the Epistles and Gospels: That the three Ceremonies, the Cross in Baptism, the Surplice, and Kneeling at the Sacrament, whether nocent or innocent, might be removed out of this, as out of divers other Reformed Churches, by means of the Bishops Mediation with his Majesty and the Parliament, on that behalf, as was thought advisable

table by the Sub-Committee for Religion, whereof the Bishop of Lincoln had the Chair, and Bishop Brownrig, Dr. Holsworth, Bishop Hacket, &c. were Members: Or at least, that the use of them might be free, according to his Majesties gracious Declaration about Ecclesiastical Affairs. I wish that of my Lord Verulam might be always sounding in the Ears of the Fathers, and the Sons and Daughters of the Church, till they give ear to it, That a contentious retaining of Custom, is a turbulent thing, as well as Innovation. Methinks 'tis as possible for Nonconformists and Conformists to be reconciled, as for the Church of England to be reconciled with Rome; and yet that great learned Bishop Bramhal thought that not altogether impossible: Supposing (saith he) that something from whence Offences either given or taken, which (whether right or wrong) do not weigh half so much as the Unity of Christians, were put out of Divine Offices, which would not be refused, if animosities were taken away. Bramh. of Sch. p. 280. To this, let me add that Golden Saying of Mr. Hales, in his little piece of Schism: Prayer, Confession, Thanksgiving, Reading of Scripture, Administration of Sacraments in the plainest and simplest manner, were matter enough to furnish out a Liturgy; though nothing either of private Opinion, or of Church Pomp, of Garments, or prescribed Gestures, of Imagery, or Musick, of matter concerning the Dead, of many superfluities which creep into the Church under the name of Order and Decency, did interpose it self.

Quest. Is there any thing that can reasonably or modestly be desired to be amended or bettered in the managery of the Ecclesiastical Government or Discipline?

Ans. The Rubrick before the Communion in the Liturgy, supposes it desirable, that the Primitive Discipline used in the beginning of Lent, might be restored; when notorious Sinners were put to open penance. Is nothing amiss? (saith my Lord Bacon) Can any man defend the use of Excommunication as a bare process to lacquey up and down for Duties and for Fees; it being the greatest Judgement next unto the General at the last day? Lord Bacon his Discourse about Church-Affairs, p. 32. And might we not say, That it seems liable to exception, that Chancellors, and Commissaries, and Officials, persons not in holy Orders, should have power of Excommunication? I have read indeed that the French King hath the power of Excommunication; but it may be considered that a Christian King is mixta Persona, & custos utriusque Tabule; and is of Right, supreme Governour over all persons, as well Ecclesiastical as Civil. Besides, it were to be wished in reason by the Bishops themselves, that the Bishops might not be control'd by their Chancellors, and their Sentence and Order, or Judgment one day in Court, be reversed or made insigniinsignificant by a contrary Order or Judgement of the Chancellor, the next.

Quest. But what's the reason that now adayes there is such Alteration and Innovation in Worship and Discipline desired and laboured for?

Answ. Divers things have along time, even all along more or less, been complained of, as grievous; and the Removal of them have been requested from our Kings and Parliaments almost ever since the Reformation. Some of the Bishops, and other men in great place, have felt the burden of some things required of them; Bishop Hooper would willingly have been dispenced withal, as to some of the Episcopal Habits. Dr. Sampson, Dean of Christ-Church in Oxford, was turned out of his place for Inconformity. Peter Martyr professor, and a Canon of Christ-Church, could yet never be perswaded to put on a Surplice all the time he was in Oxford. The Commons in Parliament, in the thirtieth year of Queen Elizabeth, presented a Petition to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, for the Redress of sixteen Grievances: The six first, saith the Historian, were against insufficient Ministers: The seventh, That no Oath or Subscription might be tendered to any at the entrance into Ministry, but such as is expressly prescribed by the Statutes of this Realm, except the Oath against corrupt Entering. The eighth, That they may not be troubled for the omission of some Rites or Portions prescribed in the Book of Common-Prayer. The ninth, That they may not be called and urged to answer before the Officials and Commissaries, but before the Bishops themselves. The tenth, That such as had been suspended or deprived for no other offence, but onely for not  subscribning, might be restored; and that the Bishops would forbear their Excommunication ex Officio mero, of Godly and Learned Preachers, not detected for open offence of Life, or apparent Error in Doctrine. The thirteenth, That the high Censure of Excommunication may not be denounced or executed for small matters, nor by Chancellours, Commissaries, or Officials, but by the Bishops themselves, with the assistance of some grave Persons. Dr. Full. Ch. Hist.

Quest. How can the Nonconformists reasonably expect any alterations and condescensions now for their sakes? Did not they deny a toleration to the Episcopal Clergy but lately? And did not the Elder Brother, Presbytery, deny to bear with the Younger, Independency? And were they not very severe and strict in punishing all Dissenters from their way? See Cont. p. 124, 125.

Answ. The Nonconformists of the Congregational way were then, and still are for Liberty of Conscience; and the Presbyterians humbly move for the like Favour and Liberty which others had in those days, different as to Government from them in the like Circumstances. They forbore the imposing of unnecessary things, or such things as were doubtful, in and about the service of God, as terms and conditions of Communion with them. Besides, they suffered many of the Episcopal persuasion without ever taking the Covenant to enjoy places in Churches, Colledges, and Schools. And 'tis notoriously known, That Dr. Wild, afterward Bishop Wild, Dr. Gunning, and others, had numerous Meetings for Common Prayer and Preaching, at London; and Dr. Hyde, Dr. Fell, and others, at Oxford, in those days. As to the five poor men (as the Author calls the Apologists) they had liberty to preach, and enjoyed the fattest and richest publick Lectures in London. Give me leave to add too, that the Parliament by their Ordinance allowed the Bishops 200 l. per annum for their Lives; and I find in the Life of Bishop Morton, that he had an Order to have 1000 l. out of the Treasury at Goldsmiths-Hall, with which he paid his Debts, and purchased to himself an Annuity of 200 l. per annum during his Life. And a fifth part of Livings, where the Minister was ejected, for maintenance of Wife and Children: And scarce any man in those days, that was able, sober, and peaceable, but might, if he had pleased, have Employment and a Livelyhood. The Parliament made no Act for Banishment of them from Corporations, forbad them not to teach Schools, or entertain Boarders in their Houses, imposed no Oath on Women that taught School, to capaci-

tate them for that Calling, or else left them liable to punishment for so doing. And although they made two Ordinances against the use of the Common Prayer, I never knew one that suffered the penalty of them.

Quest. Were there no Ceremonies imposed by the Presbyterians in any part of the Worship of God? Did they not require men to be bare-headed at the reading of the Covenant, and that they should all take it lifting up their right hand to heaven? Are not these Ceremonies? And is not an Oath a special part of Divine Worship? (See Debate, p. 166. Ed. 4.)

Ans. An Oath being an immediate and solemn Appeal to God, and having something of Invocation of the Divine Majesty in it, doth therefore require some Gesture or Posture, that is naturally expressive of Reverence, at the taking of it. Besides, the lifting up the right hand to Heaven, was that which the Angel did, when he swore. Bring as good reason, and as good a president for all the Ceremonies imposed in the Liturgy, and they will be more easily conformed unto.

Quest. Are not the Nonconformists disobedient to Governours, no Friends to Cesar, Unpeaceable, Refractory? Hath not this been their practise alway, and do not they teach men so?

Ans. His most Excellent Majesty had knowledge

ledge of divers of that way, who were commissioned by him for the Review and Alteration of the Liturgy ; and his Majesty is pleased to give them a better Character in his Gracious Declaration about Ecclesiastical Affairs. His Royal Expressions are these : We must for the honour of all those of either Perswasion, with whom We have conferred, Declare, That their Professions and Desires of true Piety and Godliness, are the same ; their professions of Zeal for the Peace of the Church, the same ; of Affection and Duty to Us, the same : They all approve Episcopacy, they all approve a set Form of Liturgy, and they disprove and dislike the Sin of Sacrilege and Alienation of the Revenues of the Church. And now his Majesty hath so far testified for them their, good Behaviour ; Hear them speak for themselves, and that when they were in Council too. "Tis the Duty of People to pray for Magistrates, to honour their Persons, to pay them Tribute and other Dues, to obey their lawful Commands, to be subject to their Authority for Conscience-sake. This they teach as Doctors in Synod in their Confession of Faith, and this they would have other Teachers teach all others in their Larger Catechise, and in part by their own example, in the Directory for publick Worship. And as for their practise, I say, greater Loyalty than this hath no man, than that a man lay down his life for his Sovereign ; and yet such were some of them ; (as Mr. Love and Mr. Gibbons.)

Some

Some of them also had tryal of cruel Mockings for their Loyalty; some of them of Bonds and Imprisonments, of Sequestration and Banishments. There are to be found among the present Nonconformists, who solicited Heaven and Earth with their Prayers and Tears, for the saving of the Life of his late Majesty of Blessed Memory. And whereas there were threescore and three unjust Judges that condemned his Majesty, there were just as many Ministers, all except two, accounted Presbyterians, who appeared with the hazard of their Livings and Liberties, (if not also of their Lives) with Scripture-Reasons, and most earnest Entreaties, to dissuade men from, and to declare against, so horrid a wickedness: Which very thing was the occasion that afterward some of them were driven from their Houses,

others imprisoned, sequestred, and

Mr. H. Dr. threatned to be hanged. That

W. Mr. A. these persons were real, cordial, and conscientious too, (and that of the Oaths they had taken to his Majesty) you may in charity judge, if you take a taste of one of those

Papers to the General, and the General Council of War, Presented and Printed during his Majesties Tryal. In it they declare against all

Proceedings against his Majesties Crown and Life, upon grounds of Conscience and Prudence: Which when they had laid down, &c. they conclude, saying, It was the Conscience of the many Oaths of

God

God in which you, we, and the generality of the Kingdom indispensibly stand bound before God, Angels, and Men; which made them thus to declare themselves. That we desire to wash our hands, as from the Blood of all men, so especially of our Dread Sovereign; and to approve our selves innocent of all that blood and misery, the Depositing and taking away
 his Majesties Life, will in our apprehension involve us, our Posterity, and all men professing Godliness in the three Kingdoms. We do therefore from our Soul
 beseech and importune you and every one of you, as Men, Gentlemen, and Christian Souldiers, by all that can be dear to good men, as you desire to render a good account of your actions at the great day, to the righteous Judge of Heaven and Earth, That you will forbear doing ought in the Premises, which may wound the Conscience, or pierce the Hearts of any of Gods People, (who are all alike with you, or any of you, precious to him as the Apple of his Eye) which may rend and tear the Bowels of this your and our native Countreys; and occasion the common Enemy to blaspheme the Majesty, Truth, and Cause of our God: And further to contribute the utmost skill, study, and endeavours of you, and every of you in your proper places (and the great Counsellor and mighty G O D direct you all) to remove ours
 and the Kingdoms fears, to remedy the present abounding Distempers, and present and universal Destruction: That we and the Generations to come, may rise up and call you Blessed; and so eminent a preservation of the Kingdom in such an extremity, may be had in everlasting Remembrance.

And as for their Loyalty to our most Gracious Sovereign that now is, (and long, and long may God continue Him, and bless Him with all the Blessings of Heaven and Earth, both in his Person and Government!) the Presbyterians have given good Proof thereof: Mr. Cawten prayed for his Majesty, with his Royal Titles, in publick; and for his so doing, was accused and arraigned of High-Treason. Others of them in private Houses prayed for him, would not own the Government that then usurped over us, nor keep their Days of Thanksgiving for the Victory at Dunbar or Worcester, nor publish their Declarations against his Majesty or Sir George Booth, and those that endeavoured his Restauration; yea, there are to be found amongst the present Nonconforming-Ministers, who had like to have been hang'd for engaging with Sir George Booth, and hardly escaped with their Lives then, who have since lost their *Living*s: Yea, so zealous were the Presbyterian Ministers for his Majesties Restauration, that the chief Quarrel in reason of the high Hierarchists against them, should have been no other than that of the men of Israel against the men of Judah, Because they were the first in bringing the King back.

Quest. Can any man believe that the High Conformists were not the great Doers and Sufferers

ters both, for his Majesty, and that meerly out of Principles of Conscience?

Ans. I acknowledge there were divers amongst the Bishops and the Conforming-Clergy, that did both do and suffer really out of principles of Conscience; yet that their own Interest had some considerable influence into the Loyalty of many of them, may be suspected; for that they seem to express more and greater Zeal against the Presbyterians, who yet endeavoured to save the King's Life, than against the Regicides themselves that put him to death; and more frequently and more fiercely every where charge, arraign, and condemn the Covenant, than the Engagement; as if they judged it was a more unpardonable crime to endeavour to extirpate Prelacy, than actually to take away King and House of Lords; more heinous to divest a Prelate of his Pontificalibus, than to cut off the Head of the Lords Anointed. This may possibly occasion many sober persons to query, If the Tables had been turn'd, and that his Majesty had been for the extirpation of Prelacy, and the removal of Liturgy and Ceremonies, and the Parliament for the continuance and upholding of them, whether many that were very hot, would not have been lukewarm, if not key-cold in his Majesties cause? I conclude the Answer to this Question, when I have laid down this great Truth; That the Mitre is more beholden to the Crown,

than the Crown to the Miter; and that it was his Majesty that restored the Bishops, and not the Bishops which restored his Majesty.

Quest. Is not this then a true Maxim in Policy, That Monarchy is greatly supported by Prelacy; and that the greatest Hectors for Uniformity serve his Majesties Interest and Government most and best?

Ans. The Lord Falkland (either then or a while after Secretary of State) said in Parliament of some stirring and leading Prelates before the War, as followeth; A little search will find them to have been the destruction of Unity under pretence of Uniformity: to have brought in Superstition and Scandal, under titles of Reverence and Decency, &c: In which they have abused his Majesty as well as his People. Heyl. Cyp. Ang. p. 408.

Quest. But if it be granted that the Presbyterians have any Loyalty to his Majesty, have they also any love to the peace of the Church, and to Dissenters from their Government? Do they not implacably hate the Episcopal Clergy, and stand irreconcilable to all Uniformity and Liturgy?

Ans. In the Presbyterians Address to his Majesty they assert the lawfulness of Episcopacy, and of a Liturgy. The mention of the names of many Bishops both in the beginning of Reformation, and of later times, are precious to them, like like an Oynment poured forth ; the memory of them is and shall be in Benedictione : And there have been never any so bad since, as to make sober persons to condemn all. There are still of the Hierarchy men of that piety, learning, temperance, meekness and moderation, that we despair not (if some Bontefean's and Incendiaries would cease blowing the coals) might be the happy Instruments to quench the Fire, and be like the good Shepherds, who bring home their Sheep when gone astray, in their very bosoms, and with their Benedictions. There are also amongst Dissenters many sons of peace, who love not to fish in troubled waters, or to blow the coals ; great friends to Unity, Peace and Order, and no enemies to Bishops ; who either keep no Private-Meetings, or therein dissuade not the people from frequenting the Publick-Assemblies, or hearing their Ministers or Liturgy.

Quest. Have not they that took the Covenant abjured all Episcopacy ?

Ans. It was declared in the Assembly before the Covenant was taken, that the Covenant did not bind against a Primitive-Episcopacy ; and at the time of taking the Covenant, this was frequently declared in private conference, and some did it from the Press and Pulpit. However, the Covenant obliges men, to act only in their places and callings, and so far as lawfully they may ; it doth not bind men to be seditious in

in the State, or schismatical in the Church, to bring about any alteration or reformation of Government: We are far from thinking (say the Presbyterians in their Paper of Proposals to his Majesty, speaking of the Covenant) that it obligeth us to any evil, or to go beyond our places and callings to do good, much less to resist Authority, to which it doth oblige us. (p. 13.) We ought not to use violent, tumultuous, seditious, or any unlawful means to bring about a Reformation. Notwithstanding the Covenant, we acknowledge it belongs to his Majesty, with the advice of the Parliament, to settle and regulate the Church-Government. And it may be remembered, that Presbyterian Parliament voted his Majesties Concessions a ground of Peace, although he never consented to the extirpation of Episcopal-Government.

Quest. Were the Presbyterians bound by the Covenant to divest his Majesty of his supremacy in Ecclesiastical Affairs? See Debate, pag. 168. 4. Ed.

Ans. An Oath for confirmation ought to be an end of all strife. They have since generally taken the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, not above six (that I hear of) refused it in all Scotland. And on the other side, 'tis not unknown to some, that a very learned and great Clerk, a Dignitary of this Church, of no small note, was hardly perswaded to take down this bitter Pill (according to his gust) though it was double-

double gilt with a Prebend of 200 l. per annum. His Majesties Commissioner presides in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. They willingly and heartily give unto the Kings Majesty the chief Government of all Estates of this Realm, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Civil. The Covenant binding men to reform according to the Word of God, could not reasonably or charitably be construed to take away that Prerogative which we see to have been given always to godly Princes in holy Scriptures, by God himself: i. e. That they should rule all Estates and Degrees committed to their charge by God, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Temporal, and restrain with the Civil Sword the stubborn and evil Doers. Yea, they are so far from waiting or clipping this his Majesties Royal Prerogative that they would not be offended; if the Statute of King Edward the Sixth, was again revived, whereby all Citations in the Courts Spiritual, should issue out in the Kings Name, and be sealed with his Seal: And if it should once please his Majesty, it would not displease them (no; though they themselves were admitted into the Church) to have a Vicar General in Spiritualibus.

Quest. Are the high Sons of the Church advanced so many degrees as is pretended above the poor Nonconformists in their Charity? See Debate, p. 20. Ed. 1.

Ans.

Answ. There is just cause to fear that amongst them, some there are, who have a greater Charity for the Church of Rome, than for the Presbyterians; that is, for them that differ from the Church of England in Substantials, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government; than for them who differ from them onely or chiefly in Circumstantials, in lesser and lighter matters, not of the Foundation of Religion, but belonging onely to the Superstructure; or if you please, at best to the adorning of it. For my own part (and for all the Nonconforming-Ministers) I may say, for ought I know, That we would sooner give the Right Hand of Fellowship to the highest and most rigid Father or Son of the Church of England, than joyn hands with Rome. That some of our Brethren of the other side have not a heart so enlarged with Charity to all men, and particularly to Dissenters, as is pretended and boasted, may be evinced by the Treatise under consideration; which may seem to be designed to render their Brethren, and Ministers of the Gospel too, ridiculous, if not odious. I heard no mean man say, That the design was, To put the Beasts Skin upon us, and then to cry, Ha-loo! Ha-loo! I must needs confess, it appears to me at least very uncivil, if not uncharitable also, to go about to pluck off the Healing and Sovereign Playster, which his Majesties Royal Hands, with the Advice of his Parliament (a whole Colledge of of Physicians) in the Act of Indemnity had laid on the bleeding Wounds which the late War had made amongst us. I might add also, that there are some passages so full of Lightness and Drollery, that they might better become some Ecclesiastical Hudibras; or a Ben-Johnson, a Doctor of the Stage, than a Rabbi, or a grave Doctor of the Church.

Quest. Are men of the high Prelacy, or high and rigid Sons of the Church, men of the highest form in Religion, and of a more perfect, serious and solid Godliness, than the poor silly scrupulous Nonconforming-Turn-outs? (See Debate, p. 155.)

Ans. 'Tis very strange if Preferment, in great places of Power and Profit should indeed make men more truly and seriously godly, and particularly should by an Antiparistasis produce the great work of Self-denial, Mortification, &c. We will not at present compare Godliness; but this I think, That 'tis no demonstration of a higher degree of Godliness to jeer at Godliness, though in a Dissenter, and accompanied with some Weaknesses and imperfections, to make the door to the Theatre and Stage so wide, and to the Church and Pulpit so strait and narrow: Certainly the true right perfect godly man, is neither your Nonconformist godly man, nor Conformist, as described in the Debate; but made up of both put together: whose Character we have in a great measure in the 165th page of the Treatise, in my opinion the best page in the Book: Where the Power of Godliness is set forth after this manner:

A truly godly man, (who hath not only a name to live, & is dead; who is a Jew not only outwardly in the flesh, but inwardly in the Spirit; who hath not only the Form, but the Power of Godliness in him) is such a one as denies himself for God and his neighbour; that sets not his heart upon getting Riches, and is humble and modest; that reverenceth his Governours, and studies in word and deed to preserve their Authority; that humours his Parents though not of their Opinion, or perhaps ungodly. that is sensible of Benefits, and grateful to Benefactors; that studies Purity and Chastity; that is kind and tenderly affected to his Relations; that keeps his Faith, and performs his Promises, though to his own damage; that is easily reconciled, if he have been grossly injured; that speaks well (if he can) of his Neighbour, and is not ready to believe ever a Story of them; that endeavours to preserve an even temper; that commands his Passions; that is steady and uniform in his Actions; that is meek and submissive, peaceable and humble; that loves Vertue wh re-ever he sees it, and doth not despise or reproach it under the name of meer Morality; that is faithful to his trust, sober, advised, and considerate in his undertakings; that hath no opinion of himself, and loves God above all things; that chuseth rather to step at home, and mind his own Concernments, than

 be prying into the secrets of his Neighbours house;
 that has no other design upon any, either man or woman, than to make them good, and further their increase in true Wisdom.

Quest. Are not the Presbyterians, Changeings, men of very limber Consciences, who instead of being call'd Turn-outs, may better be call'd Turn-coats? See Cont. p. 29.

Answ. One would think in reason, that those that are charged to be so rigid, scrupulous, superstitious, tenacious of their own Opinions, obstinate in their own way, should not easily turn with every wind. Amongst the Ministers, 'tis true, there have been Willows, as well as Oaks; amongst our Parsons, we have had some Vicars of reilas, who have turned in their Pulpits as well as the Weathercock on their Steeples. Some Ministers indeed would not turn, and for that reason are turn'd out. Confident I am, that the greatest number of them that were Sufferers
 for refusing the Engagement, and non-complying in the late times, were of those that are or have been Sufferers since for Non-conformity.

Quest. Are not the Nonconformists men of narrow Souls, and of a narrow Charity, confined to a Party, within a few private Walls or conventicles; whereas the high Sons of the Church their Charity is as large as their Churches,

ches, even as their CATHEDRALS

Answer. Sure I am their Charity is not so large as St. Paul's, Rom. 14. There was before the Wars a Lady (as I have heard from Persons of Quality) not very many years since, wrote to the Bishop of Lincoln on the behalf of a Nonconformist that was in trouble for some small Omission or Inconformity: To whom the Bishop replied, If the Person your Ladiship wrot for had been a Drunkard or a Whoremonger, I could have shewed him favour; but in this case, no at all. It is marvellous to think, but so it is, that Church-Charity should not be so large as Civil. The Members of the Long Parliament, who took the Covenant, and impos'd it upon others, (quietly in This, without having that impos'd on them, the refusal whereof, might occasion the Ejection out of the House. The Nobles and others about the Court, that were divided in the late Wars, are sodered again, love one another, and (which is a good and pleasant thing) dwell together in Unity. The Lawyers in the Inns Court, unite, cement, and plead together; do not, for the old Quarrel, turn one another over the Bar, or out of Doors. The Knights and Gentlemen in the Countrey, that fought on several sides, are reconciled, and act together as one man for the good of his Majesty and his Kingdoms, notwithstanding what passed in the late differences. Onely the Ministers and Ambassafers of the Gospel of Peace, who say and do not, will as yet have no peace, clapping their Wings to stir and beat up their Mettal, and crowing to sound an Alarm to a Paper Combate. This is a Lamentation, and ought to be for a Lamentation. Pudet hoc opprobria nobis, &c.

Quest. If the Nonconformists are so charitable, so willing to forgive what is past, and to receive Dissenters into their own Bosoms, or to come themselves into the Bosom of their Mother again, (though she may possibly be charged to have thrust them out of doors, because they have narrow Throats, and could not swallow a Pompeion instead of a Mastick Pill, or a Hedghog instead of an Oyster) what's the Reason then that of old in their publick Churches, and now-a-days in their private Conventicles, they use not the Lords Prayer? Was it not because of that Petition, Forgive us our Trespases as we forgive them that trespass against us? Debate, p.95. 1 Ed.

Ans. There were those who are now Nonconformists, that in former times used it constantly; and some who wrot Apologies for it: And divers Ministers now-a-days who do keep private Meetings, do still use the Lords Prayer in their private Congregations.

Quest. Can they be thought charitable, especially to Dissenters, that cry out of the Pope as Antichrist, and the Popish Religion as Antichristian?

Answ. King James called the Pope Antichrist in his Writings. The Homilies call him so. Hom. Tom. I. p. 17. Edit. . and again p. 38. & p. 70. Yea, the publick Prayers for the 5th of Novemb. before Archbishop Laud's time, said of the Romanists, that their Faith was Faction, and their Religion Rebellion.

Quest. Have the Nonconformists nothing momentous against the Common-Prayer and Ceremonies, but only to cry out, that it was taken out of the Mass-Book, and that they are Reliques of Rome, and Popish Superstitions? Deb. p. 97. ed. 1.

Answ. I do know scarce one intelligent Nonconformist who refuses to use the Liturgy, upon this account, only, or chiefly, because taken out of the Mass-Book. My Gold is not therefore straight become dross, because stolen out of my Chest, and found in the house of a Thief; when it is legally restored to me again, what is it the worse? The Common-Prayer is older than the Mass, as we usually take the word Mass now a-days; but the Mass, by the corruption of the Times, getting by degrees insensibly, by little and little, into the Liturgy, the Reformers finding things so, owned and adhered to the Liturgy as good Gold, but rejected the Mass as very Dross and Tin. Yet forasmuch as we cannot win the Papists to joyn with us in our Liturgy, as they did the first ten or eleven years of Q. Elizabeth; and that some of our own Church are ready to run away and separate from us, pretending we comply too much with Rome, in some of our Forms or Ceremonies : If it should please his most excellent Majesty and the Parliament, to cause the Liturgy to be revised, and some greater Alterations to be made for the better, than was of late ; it should not offend, but rather much rejoyce the Presbyterians. I have read that the Archbishop of Armagh declared his Judgment, when time was, against the introducing of the English Ceremonies into the Church of Ireland. And I have been told that the Right Reverend the Bishop of Hereford that now is, upon another occasion, expressed his Opinion to be, That the further off we keep from the Church of Rome, the better. I might add this also (which I had from a credible person presently after it was spoken) That the late Archbishop of Canterbury was very willing to have had, though a Liturgy, yet one that might not be so much displeasing, or dissatisfactory, as this was to many. I confess there are some well-meaning people who forbear to use the names of Altar, Priest, Christmast, &c. or to call Festival dayes (wherein the Church of England commemorates the Saints, and blesteth God for their example) by the names of those Saints dayes ; yet they are not altogether without all excuse in this their Scrupulosity, if we consider what a bad use they of the Church of Rome make of our keeping and con-

continuing old words ; Let us keep our forefathers words (say the Annotations on the Rhemist Testament, on 1 Tim. chap. 6.) — and we shall easily keep our old and true Faith we had of the first Christians ; Let them say Amendment, Abstinence, the Lords Supper, the Communion-Table, Elders, Ministers, Superintendents, Congregation, so be it. — Let us keep the old terms, Penance, Fasting, Priest, Charity, Bishop, Mass, Mattins, Even-song, the blessed Sacrament, Altar, Oblation, Host, Sacrifice, Alleluja, Amen, Lent, Palmsunday, Christms, &c. and the very words will bring us to the faith of our first Apostles, and condemn these new Apostates, their new faith and phrases. If we consider further what is reported of Bishop Bonner, namely, that when he saw the Reformation, and how many of their Ceremonies were retained, being asked what he thought of it ? If they like (said he) to tast of our Broth so well, they will eat of our Beef shortly. I dare say the Church since the Reformation never intended any adoration of the Bread by our kneeling in the act of receiving, and yet Bishop Hall saith thus ; I had a dangerous conflict with a Sorbonist, who took occasion by our kneeling at the receipt of the Eucharist, to perswade all the company of our acknowledgment of a transubstantiation. It must be confest further, that, amongst well-meaning people, some there are (though scarce any among the Ministry) who scruple the naming

the Apostles and other Saints, whether real or imaginary, by the name of Saints; and their plea may be, they cannot see any sufficient reason (setting aside the Authority of our Governors and the Custom of the Times and Places we live in) why we should say St. Matthew and St. Andrew, rather than St. Moses and St. Aaron; and why they should call David a Bishop in Wales, St. David, rather than K. David King in Jerusalem, the one being truly a Saint and the Lords Anointed, and the other canonized by the Pope. Yet doubtless there are none so scrupulous amongst us but had as leave say St. Michael as St. George. As for the Nonconformists-Ministers, it was the practice of Dr. Thomas Goodwin (as I am informed) and was all along the late times, to say such a Chapter, or such a Verse of St. Matthew, St. Mark, St. Paul; &c. That 'tis not always necessary to mention the Apostles with the title of Saint, for fear of sin in the Judgement of our Church, may hence be concluded, that in all the Collects for the dayes set apart to commemorate the Holy Apostles in, there are but two wherein they are stiled Saints.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists hold it utterly unlawful to keep dayes in remembrance of what the holy Apostles, and other Saints have done or suffered? and had they much rather keep a day of

pag. 64,
65.

Deb.
p. 73.
I. Ed.

Thankf-

Thanksgiving for O. C. his defeating his Majesty at Worcester, than for Michael the Archangel his victory over the Devil and his Angels?

Answ. Some think it impossible for a man, without special warrant from God, to sanctifie any day, or make it holy in a strict sense; that is, so that the service performed unto God upon that day should be more acceptable than on any other. Some think the abuses of those Festival dayes are so great, common and customary, that if his Majesty and the Parliament saw good, it would be better and more easie, to abolish the Observation of them, than to take away the Abuses, which they think cleaves to them like the Leprosie in the wall of the house. That these Feasts were of Apostolical institution, or observed by the Apostles, any except Easter, is not so much as pretended unto that I read of; Hospinian hath told us the Original of them, to be of a much later date: And as for the observation of Easter it self, Mr. Hales is of opinion that it was an Error to hold it necessary to observe such a Feast; and the Controversie about the Time (which set all the World in a Combustion; and were it not that both sides pretended Hales of Schisma, Conscience in the case, he thinks them all guilty of Schism) he saith was a matter most unnecessary and vaine. p. 5.

The old Nonconforming Ministers did use to take the opportunity of those dayes to preach

preach in to the people. Some Reformed Churches have no Saints dayes, but only keep some few dayes Holy in remembrance of our Saviour, or relating to the blessed Trinity: So as I take it, doth the Church of Scotland even at this day. For my own part I think the Church of England is well justified by Mr. Perkins from Superstition in her observance of the Festival dayes she observes. I can assure you there are that can observe a day to give thanks for the victory of Michael over the Devil, which neither did, nor could, nor would keep a day to give thanks for the victory of O. C. over the King at Worcester, or of Lambert over Sir George Booth in Cheshire. As for occasional dayes of Fasting and Humiliation, they have not been so much scrupled in the World by sober men, nor may be so liable to exception or abuse, as the stated Fasts and Feasts may; and I think usually they are more strictly observed. As for the Nonconformists private dayes, which the Author of the Debate speaks of, if they keep them no better (those that do keep them) than many, if not most do, the ordinary stated Fasts and Feasts, I think they may do every whit as well to lay them aside.

Quest. Next to Holy-dayes, what do the Nonconforming-Ministers think of the Surplice, and the rest, commonly called Holy Garments; Is it not a superstitious and a very superfluous zeal which boyls over to against these things?

Answ.

Answ. Some I confess are offended at the Surplice, because abused in the times of Popery to superstition; and conceive possibly, that because Queen Elizabeth's Injunctions or Articles say; that the gray Amice shall not be used, because it hath been so abused to Superstition; that there is the like equity for the disuse of the Surplice. There was a Learned, and Pious Person, once said; He had often worn the Surplice, but he thought he should rather be hang'd than wear it again. For my own part, I should be loth to be a Martyr for or against the Surplice; being commanded to be used by the Church, not as having any holiness in it, but onely as a decent Garment: Yea, I should be loth to be kept out of the Church or Pulpit by Suilling. The truth is, the Surplice is little beholding to those Doctors, that are the Champions for its use, when they tell us that it may teach us purity and holiness, wherewith we are to be cloathed: And may it not as well mind us of the leprosie of sin wherewith we come into the World Lepers as white as Snow? Or when they tell us that the Saints that follow the Lamb in the Revelations, were all cloathed with long White Robes; for by this reason all the People, men and women, as well as the Minister, should wear Surplices; and this too would make more for Uniformity.

Whereas 'tis said, That there is as much to be said for a Ministers wearing a Surplice, as for his wearing wearing a white Cap; and that there is no more reason for any to be offended to see a Minister wear a black Hood, or a Surplice, than to see him wear a white Cap under a black.

It may be answered, That the Surplice is a Garment commanded to be worn by the Minister in Chapel or Church, and for the time of his Administration onely: The Cap is ad libitum, at his choice, and worn at all times, and places, and employments alike; and not appropriated to holy persons or holy services; and what more reason why any man should be offended to see a white Cap under a black, than to see a little black Jack tipp'd with Silver? As for the Bishops Lawn Sleeves, (whatever the Judge said) I hope they shall not choak me. The Cassock was a Garment for a Souldier, and may well enough become those of the Spiritual Militia. The Circingle, as 'tis call'd, is not for us Nonconformists, being turn'd out to Grass: Yet I would much rather chuse to have it about my Middle, than my Neck; and to wear a Girdle, than to want a Blessing.

But now seriously to address my self to the Author of the Friendly Debate: I think an indifferent temper about indifferent things, is the best; my Religion stands not in crying them up or down; I cannot be very zealous for or against them: Yet methinks it doth not argue much skill or cunning in a Chapman that hath Wares to sell, to tell his Customers; when they enquire and would be satisfied about the goodneis of them. They are indifferent; they are indifferent: These things of themselves, and in themselves considered, with other humane Ceremonies, are but lawful, or indifferent, not necessary; in the Judgment of the Fathers and Sons of the Church. They are held, the Surplice and other Ceremonies, utterly unlawful in the Judgments and Consciences of many on whom they are imposed. Now grant it be their weakness so strongly and zealously to oppose these things; yet I most humbly beseech the Most Reverend and Right Reverend Fathers of the Church, seriously to weigh and consider what that Great Apostle St. Paul, the Great Doctor of the Gentiles, would have done in that case.

Quest. Do those do well that reproach, revile, or slight Ministers, for their Cassocks, or Girdles? &c.

Answ. They do not do well; no more do they that reproach and revile Ministers for not wearing of them. There hath been too much of this both on the Conformists and Nonconformists side; but 'tis to the commendation of neither. If we would forbear clashing one against another, live as Friends, as Brethren, and up to our profession, we should be men set by, and Reverenced by the People. What a shame is it that there should be so many several Religious Orders in the Romish Church, who have their several Habits, ceremonious Observations; and yet honour one another, and are all honoured by the People.

Quest. Yet if the Nonconformists would come into the Church, and not stand out as they do; out of Order and Rank, would not the Church be terrible like an Army with Banners?

Ans. The way to have all conform, I humbly conceive; is for the Bishops to follow the example of the Great Council at Jerusalem, to lay upon the Necks of their Disciples, whether Pastors or People, no other Burden but necessary things, Acts 15. Add to this, At this day there is no perfect Uniformity amongst our Brethren that Conform: For some read all the Prayers, some not; some pray before Sermon, some onely bid Prayer; some pray after Sermon, some not; some read Prayers on the holy days, some not; some read Prayers on Wednesdays and Frydays, some not; some preach twice a day, some but once; some Catechise in the afternoon, some not; some preach upon the 30th of January and the 29th of May, some, yea the most, not; some bow towards the Communion-Table, most not; some call it an Altar, most the Communion-Table; some bow at the name of Jesus, some not; some are for their Doctrine Calvinists, some Arminians; some are Latitudinarians, some Altitudinarians; some moderate Conformists for

Canonical Conformity; some High Conformists, and for Præter-canonical Conformity; some are Rigidissimos, that have short, narrow, little souls, and of the childrens threes; others have large, true Christian breasts, of a capacious and of a comprehensive Charity: some are for Union, Coalition, and Accommodation, though with some Condescension or yeelding on their part, (if his Majesty and Parliament think fit) others think Moderation matts all: Some account the Calvinian-Conformists, Puritan-Conformists, and could be pleased more of them were cast out of the Church; others think the Nonconforming-Puritans (such is their Life and Do&trine) may (permissu Superiorum) well be received again into the bosom of the Church.

Quest. If the Nonconforming-Ministers forbear to come into the Church and conform out of Conscience, and not out of Policy, what reason can be given why divers of them when they were offered preferments in the Church at his Majesties first coming into the Land, stood blowing upon them so long, before they would either take or leave them? D. p. III.

Ans. In the Judgment of Charity we may judge the true reason was, they expected then some Alteration and Reformation both in Worship and Government; and they waited to see whether there would be such a Reformation as their Consciences could rest satisfied withal: if so,

So, they resolved to accept those Dignities; but when they perceived things were to be settled in status quo, in the condition they are now, they waved those places and preferments. Might but Bishop Ushers Reduction have been admitted in the Government, and the Ceremonies removed; or but his Majesties Declaration about Ecclesiastical Affairs been made a Law, they would have thankfully imbraced the offers that were then made them.

Quest. What needs the removal of the Ceremonies be so much as desired of our Governors? Are they not like those of a Master of a Family to his Children and Servants to come into the Parlour or Hall at such an hour to Prayer in the Family, and to kneel there, and be uncovered during Family-Prayers? D. p. 106, 107.

Ans. The Nonconforming-Ministers are very willing to come to the Church at the hours appointed by Law, and there to stand or kneel; and be bare or uncovered at the time of Prayers, if such conformity may serve the turn: But divers look upon the Ceremonies injoyned in the Liturgy, as of another nature than those above-mentioned (relating to Peace, Order and Decency only) namely, as Rites of a Mystical or Sacramental signification, and therefore have been ejected together with Popery at first by many of the Reformed Churches beyond the Seas, who yet we doubt not worship God decently and orderly, and in the beauty of Holiness.

Quest. Are the Nonconformists such a cross-grain'd Generation, that it is the only way to bring them to Conformity; for the Magistrate to forbid the use of the Ceremonies? D.

Ans. I wish (if his Majesty pleased) tryal might be made in forbidding the Cross and Surplice, the reading the Lessons out of the Apocrypha, and the Old Translation of the Psalms of David?

Quest. Do not the Nonconformists hold that nothing may be done in the Worship of God but what is injoyned by him in his Word? Deb. p. 101. edit. 1.

Ans. They generally hold that nothing must be done as a part of Gods Worship, nor as properly a medium cultus; but they hold that the determination of meet circumstances necessary in genere, is not necessary to be set down in the Word. Vid. Mr. Baxt. his disputat. about Ch. Governm. and the Proposals of the Presbyterians to his Majesty.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists Ministers hold the Church of England no true Church, and the Ministers of it, if Conformists, no true Ministers? and do they dissuade people from frequenting the Churches, and hearing their Ministers settled in them?

Ans. The Presbyterians have justified the calling of Ministers in the Church of England, in their their Jus Divinum Ministerii Anglicani; they refuse not to communicate with the Publick Assemblies; divers that sometimes keep private Meetings for Religious Exercises, they and their Auditors go to Church also, and joyn therein in praying and hearing, and receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists-Ministers hold all superiority of one Presbyter above another, Antichristian?

Ans. As to the Bishops of the Church of England, invested with all that Power which they have, and usually exercise in the Church of England, without the joynnt-advice and consent of the Presbytery, we look upon them not as Jure Divino strictly, but as his Majesties Deputies and Commissioners in Ecclesiasticall Affairs; and, since his Majesty is pleased to make them Lords, can give them their Title, and serve God and the Church under them.

Quest. Is the Assembly in their Directory for Worship so much out in advising and directing Ministers to preach in the evidence and demonstration of the Spirit and of Power? and are those Ministers guilty of error and presumption now-a-dayes who make this a petition in Prayer before their Sermons, that they may be enabled so to preach? See Deb. p. 5. edit. 1.

Ans. The sense of the Author of the Debate and divers other Interpreters, and the sense in which the Assembly and many other pious and learned Preachers use this Scripture, 1 Cor. 2. 4 need not necessarily to exclude one the other. Take Bishop Hall's Paraphrase upon the place My speech both in my private Exhortation, and in my publick Preachings, was not curiously plausible as if I would win with words of humane Eloquence and Wit; but in plain and powerful expressions of God's Spirit speaking in me, and working in you by me. And the pious, prudent, and learned Bishop of Chester, in his Ecclesiastes, directing what kind of phrase a Minister must use in his preaching, saith, it must be affectionate and cordial, and proceeding from the heart, and an experimental acquaintance with those Truths which we deliver. — adds, this is to speak in the demonstration of the Spirit and of Power. Besides, the learned Dr. Hammond tells us in his Comment on the New-Testament, that divers places in the Old-Testament are said to be fulfilled in the New by way of Accommodation. And why may not this Scripture be used by Ministers by way of Accommodation also? Do not the Sons of the Church pray for the Clergy of England, as for God's own Tribe, the Tribe of Levi? Besides, if you seriously consider the Context, you may see cause not wholly to reject the other interpretation, namely that of Mr. Dixon in loc. Demonstrationibus Scripturae & solidae Veritatis quibus Spiritus potentior se exerebat & operabatur in vestris animis.

Quest. Do the Nonconforming-Ministers pretend now to pray by the Spirit, as if the Holy-Ghost should immediatly infuse method, matter and words whilst they pray?

Ans. Mr. Hollingworth, sometime a prime Presbyterian in Lancashire, shall answer for them. They do not hold that they ought not to take thought before-hand what they should pray, expecting that the Holy-Ghost should immediately inspire them with method, matter and words of Prayer; who ever said, it was not they that prayed, but the Holy-Ghost praying in them. And yet in this duty as well as in others, the Sons of God are led by the Spirit of God, which is a Spirit of Grace and Supplication: and because we know not what to ask, he helpeth our infirmities; and we may be said to pray in the Spirit, not onely because the holy Spirit doth stir up, warm and enlarge our affections in prayer, but he brings oft times to our remembrance the savoury and suitable phrases and passages of holy Writ, especially the promises which are most pertinent to our purpose. Why should any imagine that the evil spirit can have power to suggest evil thoughts or imaginations into us, to distract and hinder us when we are praying, and not the good and holy Spirit should suggest good thoughts and desires, and that too in his own language, I mean in Scripture-phrase and expressions, bringing them at such a time to our remembrance; Yea, the Holy-Ghost (saith that pious person) restrains the petulancy and extrava-gancy of wit, great swelling words of vanity, vain babblings, idle repetitions, &c. and he teaches us to pray in the words of truth and soberness. We acknowledge a distinction betwixt the Gift of Prayer, and the Spirit of Prayer; The one is a common gift of the Spirit, the other is a special gift or grace of the Spirit, that consists in apt expressions, outward enlargements; this in deep impressions on the heart, devout affections, which are too big for expressions; these are the sighs and groans which cannot be uttered.

A Reverend and worthy Prelate of the Church of England, treating of the gift of Prayer, P. 12. saith thus, — If it be a fault not to strive and labour after this gift, much more is it to jeer and despise it by the name of Extempore Prayer, and, praying by the Spirit: which Expressions, as they are frequently used by some men by way of reproach, are for the most part the sign of a prophane heart, and such as are altogether strangers from the power and comfort of this duty.

Quest. In case this expression may be tolerated and admit of any favourable construction, Do not they often-times use many light and indecent and sometimes very clownish expressions in their Prayer, to gratifie the rudeness of their Auditors? Deb. p. 62. edit. 4.

Ans. As for many of them they are not rash to utter any thing before the Lord, they are very serious and sober in their expressions, affectionat and zealous in their utterance. There is a little

Book of the Prayers of many of the chief of them, taken, I suppose, in Short-hand, without their knowledge, and published (for ought I know) without their consent; yet I conceive with some grains of allowance for common and pardonable errors, might pass with an Imprimatur. And if there be some who have used unbecoming expressions; Are there not to be found also among the Conformists guilty of the like Indecencies? Not to mention the Pr. of D. I. M. at Oxford, nor the Pr. of D. R. at Windsor; I hope it may be pardonable to cite that of the D. which was printed with his own knowledge; Let the Gold of our Nobility excel in Grace as they do in Honour; purifie the Silver of our Gentry from the dross of Vice; engrave upon the Brass of the Communalty the fear of thy holy Name. As for their affectionate way of utterance, I suppose it may be a means to move themselves & others to suitable affections to the duty they are about. Vocal Prayer, where it can conveniently be used, is by some preferred before mental, because 'tis a means to excite affections, and prevent distraction. One end of Prayer, as a very learned Author tells us, is not to move or affect God, but our selves, that we may be fit to receive the good things that we beg of him; and then those words and phrases, and that way of utterance or speaking which is most affectionate and least affected, which is best adapted to the matter of the prayer, and productive ductive also of good effects in our selves and others, ought to be esteemed least liable to blame or exception. Is it not the part of an Oratour to change his voice and gesture, according to the variety of the subject or matter he is speaking of? do not men begin an Oration with a low voice or tone ordinarily, and so rise higher as they go further, and ordinarily are most intense and earnest towards the Conclusion? We are directed in the Common-Prayer-Book to repeat the Confession of Sins after the Minister with a meeke heart and humble voice: And I have heard of one, that, for his voice and confidence, was charged that he confessed his sins as if he was proud of them?

Quest. Do not some Nonconformists complain that they cannot be so affected in the hearing of Common-Prayer, as at other Prayers? Deb. p. 89. edit. 4.

Ans. I have heard it bitterly complained of, that the Common Prayers which are good in themselves, should be abused by mean, pittifull, scandalous Readers, and be read in so slight and dull a manner. The Liturgy is not ordinarily, as to its effects on the generality of the Auditors, the same, when read by a worthy person, and in a grave and decent manner, as otherwise: yet I confess some reason why many men are not so much affected with the Common-Prayer as with the Minister's own Prayer, may be the frequent

repetition of the same prayers. I suppose where a man strictly tieth himself to a Form of Prayer (though of his own composing) constantly before or after Sermon, it is not ordinarily so affecting or quickning to himself or others, as when he doth otherwise. I think Prayer by forms, and conceived prayers, both lawful, and both of them have their excellencies in some respects. That by a Form, excels in some respects Conceived Prayer; in others, as I heard the Pious, Reverend and Learned Dr. Holdsworth when he was Vice-Chancellor (at the Commencement) at Cambridge determine the matter, though he concluded for the lawfulness and expediency of a Liturgy for Publick Worship; Such is the nature of man that he is ordinarily most excited in his affections, and his attention soonest engaged and raised by Novelty or variety. And hear what a Reverend Person, no enemy to Episcopacy and Liturgy, saith of Prayer by Book; There is not that life and vigour in it to engage the affections, as when it proceeds immediately from the soul it self, and is the natural expression of those particulars whereof we are most sensible. B. Ch. G. P. p. 12. Now one Reason being given in the Preface to the Liturgy, why some Ceremonies are retained, being this, because they are apt to affect the dull mind of man, &c. why may not a Minister so order his Prayers before and after Sermon, &c. as to voice and phrase, as may most probably affect him-

himself and them that joyn in prayer with him? I do by no means approve of Romantick or Courtly expressions on the one hand in Prayer, nor Rude and Rustick expressions on the other. I think Scripture-phrase is best, fittest, and of choice, therefore to be made use of. And to this (I think) I may safely say the generality of the Non-conformists do conform as much as the Conformists themselves.

Quest. How can a man joyn in a Prayer in which he is not before acquainted?

Ans. As a man may in his judgment assent unto any Divine Truth delivered in a Sermon, which he never heard before; so may B. C. he joyn in his affections unto any holy desire in a Prayer which he never heard before. If he who is mouth of the rest, shall through impudence deliver that which he cannot approve, God does not look upon it as our Prayer, if our Desires do not say Amen to it.

Quest. Do the high Prelatists allow of Ministers to pray any Prayer besides the Common-Prayer?

Ans. Dr. Heylyn condemns the custom of praying before and after Sermon. We are told that this doth frustrate the end and design of the Liturgy, and that 'tis needless, &c. And that although many Orthodox men, not intending evil thereby, have in latter times taken up this fashion, yet they are generally to be blamed, and have have much to answer for their Nonconformity herein, if we believe the Author of a late Pamphlet, call'd the Converted Presbyterian.

Quest. What is to be thought of Afternoon-Sermons, is not that a thing wholly superfluous, and would it not be better if as the Citizens and others have reduced their Families to one Meal a day; so the Ministers would their Congregations to one Sermon a day, and so have nothing besides Common-Prayer and Catechism in the evening? Deb. p. 89. edit. 4.

Ans. The Lord Falkland, in his Speech in Parliament, complained of some leading Bishops before the Wars, that they cried up Catechising, to decry Preaching. Catechising indeed is talked of much, but by many 'tis to be feared, it is to juggle out the Afternoon-Sermon out of doors: for we find in many Churches there is neither Preaching nor Catechising in the Afternoon. Of old, preaching was accounted præcipuum munus Episcopi, the Bishops chief Work or Office. Bishop Latimer was very smart against Unpreaching Prelates in his time; but of later times the Lord Falkland in his speech in Parliament charged some of that Order that they discouraged and discountenanced Preaching; that they preached not themselves, and discountenanced them that would. And not long before the Wars, I heard a Friend, a Minister (that had been with his Diocesan) who said, That upon his quoting

quoting of Bishop Davenant to the Bishop, in justification of something he said; the Bishop replied, WHAT DO YOU TALK OF HIM, A PREACHING-COXCOMB! Bishop Latimer, Ridley, Jewel, &c. were great Patrons of Preaching, and themselves practis'd it. Archbishop Grindal went so far as to countenance the Meetings called Prophecyings; and Bishop Hall of late thought they might be profitable. Former Histories did not tell stories of any Bishop of the Reformed Religion, that gave God thanks that he had not left one Lecture, or one afternoon-Sermon in all his Diocess. There was a Gentlewoman of good Quality, cited a Kingly Preacher, viz. Solomon in his Ecclesiastes, for preaching in the Evening as well as Morning, Eccles. 11.6. In the morning sow thy Seed, and in the Evening withhold not thy hand. In the Country they account those Shepherds most careful of their flocks, and to have usually the best Sheep, who fother twice a day. The Apostle Paul exhorts to be instant in season and out of season: a Sermon in the afternoon can be but out of season. 'Tis observed that the Sermons at Court before Queen Elizabeth were constantly in the afternoon. And I knew a Parish in the Country, where it was desired by the good women, That in case their Minister would preach but once a day, it might be in the afternoon; because, they said, it might be a means to keep their Husbands out of the Alehouse.

The

The Morning Service according to the Common Prayer-Book being so long, they thought a Sermon might be better spared in the morning than in the afternoon.

Quest. Although preaching in the beginning of the planting the Christian Religion might be necessary, yet is it so in these days?

Ans. Preaching serves not onely to inform the Understanding, but to excite and awaken the Affections, and to bring to remembrance what we have been taught before. Paul planted, and Apollos watered even there where the Apostle Paul had first planted. A good Stomach can digest two Meals a day, and why may not a Soul of a healthful constitution have two Meals a Week. I believe the Christians in Russia have never the fatter Souls for going in lean Pastures, for two Meals, I mean two Sermons a year.

Quest. Would it not be good Policy not to suffer any to preach, but onely to read Common Prayer and the Homilies? Would not this be an effectual way and means to prevent Errours and Heresies, Rents and Divisions amongst us? Doth not this preaching sow many Tares in the Field of the Church?

Ans. I have heard of some Preachers indeed who preach down preaching, but I take them to be never a whit the better Preachers, nor the better Christians for that; I acknowledge the Homilies to contain wholsom and very profitable Doctrines,

Doctrine, and think I should spend my time better to hear one of them read, than to hear some Preachers now-a-days. But if ability to read the Book of Common Prayer and the Book of Homilies, be all the Book-Learning necessary for a Minister, 'tis to be feared that some Princes or Parliaments may come, before many Ages pass, who may be so thrifty as to be willing to save the needless expence of a million or two millions a year in Church-Maintenance; and think 20 l. per annum enough for men of such Parts, Education, and Learning.

Quest. Is not Catechising the younger people in the afternoon, a very profitable and a laudable practice?

Ans. This I can say, I used it for many years together, besides preaching usually twice a day. 'Tis observed that the Protestants in the beginning of the Reformation, got advantage over the Papists, by their diligence in Catechising; and that since the Papists by their diligence the same way, have got ground of us. I am not against the use of the Church-Catechism for Children; and do really think the Right Reverend Bishop Nicholson hath deserved well for his Exposition of it. But I confess I cannot approve of the Vicar that in his Catechising, going about to justify that Question, What is thy Name? brought that Scripture for it, where 'tis recorded of our blessed Saviour, that he said to the man possessed of
the

the Devil, What is thy Name? and he answered,
My Name is Legion.

But as for the knowledge of the Catechism (if it may lawfully be done) I could be glad none might be married before they give an account of it.

Quest. Sith preaching is so necessary, what way of preaching is best? The Jingling way, or the Rational Philosophical way, or the Rational Scripture way, with Reasons out of Scripture,
 and Testimonies from Scripture?

Answ. I dare not commend the first way;
 which yet I suppose was more practis'd in former times than of late: Such as that was of Dr. Pl.
 on that place of the Canticles, My Bed is green;
 Typical, My; Topical, Bed; Tropical, green:
 Typical, Topical, Tropical; My Bed is green.
 Such as was that of the Doctor and Dignitary at Oxford about the lost Groat; such as was the mode of the Wits about thirty years ago; and
 such as was well expressed and exposed since by a Citizen or Countryman, who being asked how he liked the Sermon, and how the Minister preached? Answered, He could not say much of it, but it ran or sounded thus, as if he had said,

A Pudding, a Pie;

A Pudding-Pie:

A Pudding for thee;

A Pie for me;

*A Pudding-Pie
For me and thee.*

Nor do I look on him as one of the finest Preachers, that lately exhorted his Hearers to put on the Sattin of Sincerity, the Purple of Purity, and the Silk of Simplicity.

As for the Rational way, the mode of some great Doctors of these days, if they would intermix more of Scripture-Reason, or Scripture-Testimonies, it might be very profitable for learned Auditories.

As for the way by Doctrine, Reason, and Use, by Testimonies out of the holy Scriptures, more than Citations out of the Ancient Fathers, or by Reasons deduced from Philosophy, (such as I apprehend was the preaching of Mr. Perkins, Mr. Hildersham, old Mr. Dod, Archbishop Usher, Bishop Sanderson, Bishop Reynolds, and many others in our days) I think it most edifying to ordinary Auditors: And this I conceive to be that which the Assembly mean in their Directory for preaching, and others in their Prayers before Sermon, by preaching in the evidence and demonstration of the Spirit and of Power. Bishop Hall in his Paraphrase, and the Bishop of Chester in his Ecclesiastes, as I conceive, are both of this Judgment. Scripture-Reasons, and Scripture-words and phrases, do best of all become a Minister of the Word. Doctrina Evangelii cum sit Divina

ne tota spiritalis Divinis etiam verbis explicanda, & Divinis rationibus confirmanda est, ut proportio
 servetur inter res & verba itemq; argumenta, qua-
 re non temerè in rebus Theologicis usurpanda sunt
 humana phrasès, nec rationes Philosophicæ nisi pro-priè evidentes sint facile adhibendæ. Vorstius on the second Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians.

Quest. Are not all private Meetings for exercise of Religion, illegal and schismatical, though not in opposition unto the Publique Assemblies?

Ans. Till of late, a Conventicle, I have heard, was a Meeting under pretence of Religion, where people met to pray and preach against the Government of the Church and State: The Bishop, by the Canons, hath power to give leave for the keeping of a private Fast: And I know a Bishop that did so, before the Act against Conventicles was made.

Quest. Is it impossible that they should be either good Christians or good Subjects; who keep
 and frequent private Meetings, commonly called Conventicles?

Ans. There are amongst the Papists (whom I may suppose the Author of the Debate thinks good Christians and good Subjects) who assemble themselves for Religious Exercises. And there were a Congregation of Protestants in the Reign of Queen Mary, which yet were good

Christians and good Subjects ; and which I would not brand with the name of a Conventicle, no more than the Author of the Debate would the Meetings of Dr. Gunning, Dr. Hyde, and others for the Common Prayer in the late times ; although if Conventicles be against the Common Law, that was the same then and now.

Judicious Mr. Hales in his Tract of Schism. P. 2. hath more Charity for Dissenters

When either false and uncertain Conclusions are obraded for Truth, and Acts either unlawful, or ministring just scruple, are required of us to be performed ; in these Cases, (saith he) Consent were Conspiracy ; and open Contestation is no Faction or Schism, but due Christian Animosity.

Quest. Whether do the Nonconformist-Ministers look after Visions and Revelations ?

Answ. 'Tis that which the Papists and Semi-Papists, the Quakers, pretend unto ; but these I conceive may rather be ranked amongst the Conformists, than the Nonconformists, by the like reason that Seekers and Anabaptists are numbered amongst Nonconformists. And here let me insert a short story :

In the late times, One (now a great Son of the Church) travelling with two (now Nonconforming Ministers ; he being the Senior Man and Minister was desired to pray with them and for them, before they went to Bed : this he did ; and in his Prayer prayed

ayed, That God would send them Godly Dreams that night. On occasion whereof, one of the Ministers said to the other, He did not like this over-godliness; he that would over-godly it, would under-godly it.

If any Nonconforming-Ministers have been superstitiously observers of Dreams, it may be queried whether the late Little Great Archbishop of Canterbury was not guilty of the same fault also.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists perswade or assure themselves of Gods favour onely or chiefly from a voice within them, which they say is the holy Spirit, telling them that they are Jedidiab's, beloved of God? And do they not look upon that Graces the holy Spirit hath wrought in them, as evidences of his Love?

Ans. We affirm that the works or fruits of the Holy Ghost in us, which upon search we find in our own Souls, are our Evidences of Gods love to us. If we once find in our selves those gracious Qualifications to which the Promises of pardon, Peace, and Comfort are made in the holy Scripture; this is every whit as sure as if an angel from Heaven should tell us with an audible Voice, Be of good cheer, your sins are forgiven you; Peace be to you, you are the Favourites of Heaven. The Spirit of God is first a sanctify-ing, and then a sealing Spirit; first he converts
 us, and then he comforts us.

Quest. Do not Nonconformists vaunt too much of their Assurances, Comforts, Experiences And may not these prove strange fancies in conclusion?

Answ. The holy Prophet David, and the blessed Apostle Paul, both cite their own Experiences, and draw comfort from them

1 Sam. 17. He delivered me from the mouth of the Lion, and from the paw of the Bear, and he will deliver me from this uncircumcised Philistine: So the one. And he hath delivered, he doth deliver; in whom I trust also that he will yet deliver. So the other.

Quest. Do these Nonconforming-Ministers cheat the People, by making them believe that they preach experimentally what they have heard and seen, and experimented themselves. Delet. p. 35, 37. Edit. 4.

Answ. I have heard that it was the Saying of a Learned Man, no Nonconformist, That the way to be a good Preacher, was to get a good Heart. Doubtless that which comes from the Heart, is most likely to go to the Heart. He that hath tasted the sweetness of Honey and Sugar, can better speak of it, knows better by his experience the sweetness of Honey and Sugar, than he that hath only heard and read of it in a Book. Holy David, a King and a Prophet, called to others to hearken, and he would tell them what God had done for his Soul. He that hath been perswaded and converted himself, is likeliest to perswade and convert others.

'Tis storied of Junius, That before his Conversion, meeting once with a Country-man as he was in a Journey, and falling into discourse with him about divers points of Religion, he observed the plain fellow to talk so experimentally, with so much heartiness and affection, as made him first begin to think sure there was something more in those Truths, than his notional humane Learning had yet discovered; which occasioned his more serious enquiry into them, and afterwards his Conversion.

Quest. Is it proper to alledge the conversion of Souls from the Error of their Ways, as a Seal to our Ministry?

Answ. The Apostle St. Paul, when his Ministry was questioned and disgraced, appealed unto this, 2 Cor. 3. 2. Ye are our Epistle, (viz. of commendation to or from the Church of Corinth) written in our hearts, known and read of all men. This Epistle was the Apostles Evidence and Seal that he was a true Minister of the Lord Jesus.

But this I must have leave to say, that 'tis no evidence of a real conversion, to rail at Bishops, or the Common Prayer; nor on the other side, at Nonconformists, as Schismatics, Sectaries, Rogues, &c. I know that Religion is another thing, and teacheth other things, better things than these. And I believe there are serious, sc-

ber, solid, godly persons, excellent Christians, placable, Sons of Peace, of both Perswasions; that pray to God, and would be ready to joyn in Petition to Authority, for some expedient for a Reconciliation: And such a spirit as this, I look on as a Gospel-spirit, and well-becoming Preachers and Professors of the Gospel of Reconciliation: and if there be any of either side, that have not attained to this or the like spirit, I look on them as of a lower form of Godliness; and on endeavours and aſtings contrary to this way of Peace, to be no part of their Godliness, or any evidence of their Conversion; though I will not say, they are therefore ungodly or unconverted.

Quest. Why do not Nonconformists preach up Peace and Unity, and Obedience to Superiours?

Ans. You tell us that the Nonconformists hold it their duty to declare the whole Counsel of God; and they tell us that 'tis their duty to pray for Magistrates, and to obey their lawful Commands for Conscience-sake; and therefore 'tis but Charity to judge they will not be wanting in what they are convinced of, is their Duty.

If there be any that sow the Seeds or Tares of Division and Disobedience, whether in private Meetings, or publick Congregations; I say concerning them, O my Soul, come not thou into their secrets,

secrets, unto their Assemblies be not thus united :
 yet there are, I fear, who cry peace, peace, when there is no peace, but war in their hearts; all the Peace and Unity they intend and endeavour
 after, is but to bow all to their own Bent, Ways, Opinions, and Sentiments; and to break all those whom they cannot bend. Some there are,
 who with much pretended Zeal, cry, and that aloud, for obedience to Magistrates and Laws, and act more out of policy and self-interests, than Conscience; making these but as stalking-horses,
 the better to come near, and to shoot at their own Game; thus taking vengeance on their own
 supposed Enemies, whilst they seem to do God
 and his Vice-gerent service: Hereby breaking the whole Law of God, pretending the observation of the fifth Commandment; and that fundamental Law of our Peace and happiness, the Act of Indempnity, whilst they pretend Zeal to the Act of Uniformity: Else what's the reason that they seldom or never preach but upon that subject, when as it sufficeth by the Canons to treat of it four times a year. For my own part, I acknowledge and profess 'tis a duty to preach obedience to God and his Vice-gerent, both to be obedient our selves, and to teach others also this duty by Precept and Example: Yet I must confess, I do not think they do all things decently and in order, who always preach up the Duty of the people at Court, nor they that preach the duty
 of Rulers in the Country.

Quest.

Quest. But are there not Nonconforming-Ministers, who were formerly great Friends to the Army, and Countenancers and Encouragers of them in their illegal, unjust, and horrid Proceedings against King and Parliament?

Ans. I know none of the whole Tribe of the Presbyterians that are so. I have heard of one Mr. Martin lately imprisoned for a Conventicle at Warwick, that lost his Arm in his Majesties service; and I have heard of one that marched before the Souldiers, when they went to fight against his Majesty at Worcester, that hath been a zealous Conformist since: Nor do I know that he and many others ever saw day, till the Royal Sun arose in our Horizon, to scatter the Clouds that hung over their eyes. The horrid murder of his late Majesty, as it was abhorred and declared against by the Presbyterian Ministers, and others, in City and Country, from Pulpit and Press; so it was (that I know of) never undertaken to be justified by any Minister in print, but by J. G. that great Goliath and Champion of the Arminians. And the Presbyterians, yea, those who were Commissioners for the View of the Liturgy, Declare in one of their Papers to his Majesty, That till the Covenant was decried as an Almanack out of date, and its Obligation taken to be null, that odious Fact could never have been perpetrated against your Royal Father, nor your Majesty so long expelled from your Dominions.

Quest.

Quest. Do the Nonconforming-Ministers call those Moral Preachers who preach obedience to the Moral Law, and the necessity of good Works?

Answ. He that rightly divides the Word of Truth, must preach Law and Gospel both; Moral as well as Evangelical Duties; yet 'tis best to preach the Law as it was first delivered in the hands of a Mediator. Blame them not if they preach frequently the Gospel, and the great love of Christ to sensible Sinners, because the love of Christ constrains us to love him again; 'tis the Loadstone of Love: Nothing, they say, is more easie, than to love him that loves us; and the Apostle John tells us, That we love God, because he first loved us. But 'tis not very long since Puritan Preachers, as they were nick-named, were charged to preach nothing but Hell and Damnation.

Quest. Do Nonconforming-Ministers use to preach Comfort to ungodly Sinners, resolving still to live ungodly?

Answ. No, by no means: The Presbyterians and others used to declare against Antinomianism, and to preach Repentance towards God, as well as Faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; to him that was sensible of sin, and weary of it, and that mourned for it, they were willing to preach glad Tydings of Remission, and Reconciliation: They were and are Enemies both to presumption
and

and desperation, and seek to save Souls from perishing either way : They are ordinarily first Boanerges's, then Barnabas's ; and seek first and most to wash the inside of the Platter, than the outside ; first they aim to cleanse the Heart, then the Hands : They press men first to seek God in prayer with their whole heart for pardon and grace, and then direct them how to pray (whether with or without a Book in private) as shall be most expedient for them ; they deny (those that I converse withal) that they dissuade any from the use of the Liturgy or Common Prayer. This indeed is a Maxime with them in Religion, Quod cor non facit non fit ; and that the devotion of the Soul, is the soul of Devotion.

Quest. In case a person be truly troubled in Conscience for his sin, to which is he to be sent for Comfort ? To the Law, or to the Gospel ; to his own Obedience or Good Works, or to the Obedience of Christ ?

Answ. The ordinary method of Cure, is first to search the Wound to the bottom, and then to apply healing Remedies ; first to pour in Wine, and then Oyl. Our Physicians use first to purge or vomit their Patients, and then to give Cordials : So spiritual Physicians, till the Patient be truly and rightly sensible of his sins, they send him to the Law, for by the Law comes the knowledge of sin, the horrid nature and demerit of it ; but then for Comfort, they send him to the Gospel, to this sovereign Balsom; yea, they pour on them the Oyl of Gladness, upon whom they perceive has been the Spirit of Heaviness: They say not, Physitian heal thy self; but rather send them to the Great Physitian, by whose stripes we and they are healed: We dare not trust in our own Righteousness, but in the Lord our Righteousness.

Quest. Do not Nonconformists, as they desire liberty from the Impositions of Men in the Worship of God, so preach up liberty from the Commandments of God in the Course of their Lives? Or at least do they not lift up their Voice like a Trumpet, when they publish the Gospel; but onely speak in a small and still Voice, when they treat of Obedience to the moral Law?

Ans. 'Tis an unjust Calumny cast on the Protestants by the Papists, That they are Solifidians, and against good Works: And 'tis an uncharitable censure of the Nonconformists by the Author of the Debate, that they do not preach obedience to the Moral Law, as well as Faith in Christ; and the Duties of the second Table of the Law, as well as of the first. Whoever reads the Assemblies Confession of Faith, their Larger and Shorter Catechism, Mr. Dod on the Commandments, Mr. Anthony Burgess his Vindicia Legis, &c. may see clearly that the Nonconformists are not Libertines, (though they desire some Liberty) and that though they pray to be delivered

red and freed from humane ceremonial Laws, (as God has freed them from the Ceremonial Law of his own making) yet they are not Antinomians; they commend, and in Gods name require, Obedience, as well as Faith; Doing, as well as Believing; they commend Moral Honesty, but prefer Piety: We deny him to be a truly godly man, that is not a good honest man; we deny him to be righteous before God, that endeavours not to approve himself righteous, in his dealings with men. We would not by any means break the two Tables, by dashing them one against the other; and yet we prefer the Gospel before the Law, Christ to Moses, the second Covenant to the first, that of Grace to that of Works.

Quest. Is not Obedience then to the Moral Law, the Condition of our Justification? See Debate, p. 13.

Ans. No: 'Tis not the Condition D. M. and Qualification of the Covenant, so properly, as 'tis of those Persons that enter into the Covenant. Faith justifieth the Person before God, and Obedience justifieth the Faith before men. Obedience (saith a Reverend Author) must be in the same Subject with Faith, but it hath not a Voice in the same Court. We do not cry down mans Obedience, when we cry up the Obedience of Christ, as the matter of our Justification, and the Imputation of it, as the form of our Justification: We dare not appear before
God

God in our own filthy Garments and menstruous Cloaths: We expect a Blessing from our Heavenly Father, when we are arrayed with the Robes of our Elder Brother Jesus Christ his Righteousness, which sends up a sweet smell in Gods Nostrils.

Quest. Is Faith, or believing in Christ, a coming to Christ, or a relying on Christ for the pardon of our sin? See Debate, p. 43.

Ans. Yes: John 7. 37, 38. there coming to Christ, and believing, are all one: And to what end Sinners are called to come to Christ, we may learn from our blessed Saviour, Mat. 11. 28. namely, That they may find rest. I believe in God, (saith Bishop Nicholson in his excellent Exposition of the Church-Catechism) as if I said, I put my whole trust, hope, and confidence in him, I rely upon him: And so may Faith in Christ, I think be very well described, to be a relying on Christ for the pardon of our sins, and all good things. If my memory fail not, I have often heard that Renowned Professor, Dr. Samuel Ward, deliver it for good Doctrine in the Chair, That Faith was Recumbentia in Christum Mediatore, &c. a Recumbency on Christ for the pardon of sins. One Mr. Down, that wrote too against Separation, defineth Faith to be a rest of the Will upon Christ and his merits, for Justification, and consequently Salvation. And the same Author observes that the Hebrew words אמן and אמן are all words equipollent in the old Testament ; and what is meant by them in the Old Testament, is expressed in the New by Believing : To instance in one, Trust in the Lord with thy whole heart, saith the Old Testament, Prov. 3. 5. If thou believest with thy whole heart, or with all thy heart, saith the New, Act. 8. 37. We may define Faith thus : It is a gracious habit infused into the Heart by the Spirit of God, whereby the Soul rests or rolls it self upon Christ for all things appertaining to Life and Godliness, for Gods Glory and its own Salvation.

Quest. Who are the greatest Enemies to the Church of England, and to Religion it self, those who bring in new and strange Doctrines, or those that dissent onely from her as to the Ceremonies ?

Answ. Those that differ in Substantials of Religion, are to be thought more to differ, than those that differ onely in Circumstantials ; and those ought to be reputed the greatest Nonconformists, who do not conform to the Doctrine of the Church of England, set forth in her Articles, Homilies and Liturgy.

Quest. Who are they ?

Answ. Even many that have been conformable enough as to Ceremonies ; their Names and Tenets you may find in a Book entitled Laudensium Αποστασία, and in another called Laudensium Αυτοκακρία : Who they were that maintained these Doctrines, and their Doctrines in in some measure also, you may find in Mr. Rushworth's Collections, and others, who have written the History of the Times immediately preceding the late Wars. I shall refer you to one, and that is Dr. Fuller in his Church-History, who relates, that it was complained of to the Sub-committees for Religion in Parliament, (of which Subcommittee the Bishop of Lincoln, the Bishop of Armagh, the Bishop of Durham, the Bishop of Exeter, Dr. Sam. Ward, Dr. Hacket, Dr. Holdsworth, and others, were Members) that all the Tenets of the Council of Trent (abating only such points of State-Policy against the King's Supremacy, as were made Treason by the Statute) Good works Co-causes with Faith in Justification, private Confession by particular enumeration of sins, needful necessitate medii to Salvation; that the Oblation (or, as others, the Consumption of the Elements in the Lords Supper) holdeth the nature of a true Sacrifice, Prayers for the Dead, lawfulness of Monastical Vows, the gross substance of Arminianism, and some dangerous points of Socinianism had been preached or printed by some amongst us.

Quest. If it should be proved true, that the high Conformists should warp somewhat from the Doctrine of the Church of England; yet have they not all, and alwayes been constant and firm to the Government to King and Parliament, and great admirers of what their Superiors do and say?

G

Answ.

Answ. Dr. Heylyn tells us that he cannot reckon the death of King Edward the sixth, for an infelicity of the Church of England, for being (as he saith) ill principled in himself, and easily inclin'd to imbrace such counsels as were offered to him, it is not to be thought but that the rest of the Bishops, before sufficiently impoverished must have followed Durham; and the poor Church left as destitute of Lands and Ornaments as when she came into the world in her natural nakedness. The above-named Dr. Heylyn, in his History of the Reformation, chargeth the Grandees at Court and in the Parliament of those times, with such vices and crimes, as our Adversaries may make use of to blemish our Reformation. All which, with some other considerations, may give occasion to some to think, that what the Devil said falsely and maliciously against Job, may, a little altered, be too truly, and without breach of charity, said of some high blades; Do they fear and honour the King and Parliament for nought? Have they not made a hedge about them, and about their house, and about all that they have on every side, and their Substance is increased in the Land? But let but King and Parliament put forth their hand now, and touch all they have, and they would (if not for fear of punishment) curse them to their face.

Quest. Is there any other absolute promise besides that of sending Christ into the World?

Answ. Yes, many; As that Gen. 9. 9. not to drown drown the World any more. That of calling of the Gentiles, Gen. 49. 10. The promise of the Conversion of the Jews, as is generally thought, Rom. 11. The promise of giving Christ the Heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psal. 2. And that Isa. 53. He shall see his Seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands: That Christ shall have a Seed to serve him; that Christ shall certainly and infallibly save some; and the Lord knows who are his: That he hath not shed his Blood in vain, like water spilt on the ground; that this glorious Head of the Church, shall certainly have a Body in some measure answerable and suitable to the Head, &c. The promise of First Grace is thought to be absolute, I will take away your heart of Stone, and give you a heart of Flesh. 'Tis confess'd, we are bid to convert and turn, and to come to Christ, and to make our selves new hearts; and yet 'tis as true, that we cannot do any of these things of our selves, without Divine Assistance, and special Grace: But this for our Comfort, That which is the matter of Duty in one place of Scripture, is the matter of a Promise in another: And again, That Gospel-Commands are not onely significations of our Duty, but Conveyances of strength to do our Duty.

Quest. Is not Mr. W. B. absurd in comparing Gods people to Plate?

Answ. I answer, There is Scripture-ground enough to justify the calling of Gods people his Plate: for in Scripture they are called Gods Jewels, or his peculiar Treasure, Psal. 3. 17. And obdurate wicked men are compared to Reprobate Silver, Jer. 6. 30.

Quest. May we not say, That we come to the Promises by Christ?

Answ. In him are all the Promises Yea, and in him Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. As a woman hath a right to her Joynture, by first taking the man to her wedded Husband; so Christians have a right to the Promises, and all good things, by taking Christ first for their Lord and Husband.

Quest. Is fear the chief and principal motive of a Christian to Duty and Obedience, I mean the fear of punishment?

Answ. No: The chief and best Principle is Love; I look on them as of a lower form in Religion, who onely serve God for fear of Hell: Although this fear is useful, yet 'tis not the principal motive to obedience in Gods Children. And this was the Divinity of former times. I do not hold it unlawful to serve God for fear of punishment, nor hopes of Reward; yet this I say, That fear alone speaks a man a Servant, and love speaks a man a Son: And those are the best Servants to Vertue, who serve virtutis amore, for the love of Vertue. A man may hate the good he doth, and love the evil which he doth not do.

If then a man do that which is commanded merely or chiefly for fear of Hell, is he necessarily one of Gods best Servants? I think not; because he may at the same time hate the good he doth, and love the evil he abstains from. As for working with an eye to the Reward intuitu mercedis, 'tis justifiable and commendable; 'tis that which Moses did, Heb. 11. 26. and which our blessed Saviour did; and it sufficeth the Servant to be as his Master; Christians to be Followers and Imitators of Christ their Lord and Master.

Quest. Are good Works necessary to our Justification? Debate, p. 13.

Ans. The Church of England in her 11th Article, teaches her Children thus: We are righteous before God, onely for the merit of the Lord our Saviour Jesus Christ by Faith, and not for our own Works or Deservings: Wherefore that we are justified by Faith onely, is most wholsom Doctrine, and very full of Comfort, &c. And in her Book of Homilies, Tom. 1. pag. 17. Edit. 1623. thus: Justification is not the Office of man, but God: or man cannot make himself righteous by his own Works, neither in part nor in whole; for that were the greatest arrogance and presumption of Man, that Antichrist could set up against God.

Quest. Hath the Doctrine of the Imputation of Christs Righteousness for our Justification, been the Doctrine of our Church, and the prime Doctors of it?

Answ. The Papists indeed call it with a jeer, Putative Righteousness. And 'tis storied of a Popish Bishop, lighting accidentally on that place, Rom. 4. 6. Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man unto whom God imputeth Righteousness without Works, &c. threw away the Book in great displeasure, and said, O Paule ! an tu quoque Lutheranus factus es ? O Paul. art thou also become a Lutheran ? 'Tis observed by a Conforming Minister, that the Apostle Paul mentions this grace of Imputed Righteousness ten times in the 4th chapter to the Romans; and Bishop Andrews in his most excellent Sermon on that Scripture, Jehova Justitia nostra, His name shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness; and Bishop Downham, in his Treatise of Justification, strongly asserts it: And the Doctors of the Chair for a long time, have taught the same Doctrine. So that now I should think that Doctor, though in the Chair, to be besides the Cushion, that teaches otherwise.

Quest. Is the difference betwixt the Old and New Covenant this, that the Old Covenant made with the Jews propounds temporal rewards and the Gospel propounds eternal? and hath this been the Doctrine of the Church of England and of the prime Doctors since the Reformation? Deb. p. 26.

Answ. The 7th Article of the Church of England saith thus; The Old Testament is not contrary rary to the New. Both in the Old and New Testament everlasting life is offered to mankind by Christ, who is the only Mediatour between God and man; wherefore they are not to be heard which say, that the old Fathers did look only for transitory promises.

Quest. Do not Nonconformists abuse the people in their preaching, by preaching in the Apostolical language, That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you?

Ans. I think the Prophet David doth not abuse himself and others, when he saith, O taste and see that the Lord is gracious; Nor the Apostle Paul the Ephesians, when he tells them that Jesus Christ came and preached peace to them that were near, and to them that were afar off; Nor the Galatians, when he saith, Jesus Christ was evidently set forth, crucified amongst them: Neither doth Job juggle, or cast a mist before his own and others eyes, when he saith, with these eyes he shall see his Redeemer; although we take the interpretation of Mercer on the place, of his Recovery here. What though the Apostles saw our Saviour in the flesh, heard his Sermons, and conversed daily with him; may not Christians now-a-days see him with an eye of Faith in his Word and Sacrament? and hear him when he speaks to us in the Writings of the Apostles, as it were from Heaven, and by the mouthes of his Ministers upon Earth? Must no passage or phrase of Scripture be used but in its first signification?

sure we are that many places of the Old Testament are used in the New, chiefly or only by way of accommodation.

Quest. Do the Nonconforming-Ministers amule and abuse the people when they speak of Spiritual desertions?

Ans. Who so please to read Mr. Perkins his Cases of Conscience, Mr. Capel on Temptations; and Dr. Sibbs his Souls Conflict; although they never saw Dr. Goodwyn, may see a Child of Light walking in Darkneß; And in such a case I would not send for, as Saul did, one to play upon an Instrument; Nor, with a Conformist Minister, that I knew, when his Daughter was in trouble of mind for her sins, counsel her to play at Cards; Or with another, how learned soever they be, send them to a Theatre; but either to some able Minister, or to Prayer & the Promises, advising them to put them in suit in the Court of Heaven; for 'tis God only that kills and makes alive, he wounds and he heals: In his presence is life; and his withdrawing or deserting of the soul, though for a time only, is as the shadow of death. If our blessed Lord on the Cross cried out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? what so great wonder, if a Christian under the Cross, oft-times complains, Why hidest thou thy face, and I am troubled? Is the Servant above the Master? If these things be done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

Quest.

Quest. Are the Nonconformists Time-servers?
Deb. p. 65.

Answ. If so, why do they not serve the Times now, and themselves of the Times? Certain it is there are some now Nonconformists, whose consciences would not permit them to serve the Times in Bradshaw's or O. Cromwel's dayes; divers who were turn'd out for not taking the Engagement, have since been outed for Nonconformity: They could not serve the Times then, and the Times will not serve them now. Can ye think we are such Bedlams as to chuse sorrow and suffering, Bonds and Imprisonments, when we might so easily escape all sufferings, and have all, honourable employment in the Ministry, and some of us (perhaps) preferment and advancement like our Brethren that conform:

Quest. Do not the Nonconformists call the Liturgy, Broth?

Answ. I never did so, and I approve not any that do; yet possibly the expression might first be occasioned from that saying of Bishop Bonnors, formerly mentioned upon our retaining some part of their Service-Book and Ceremonies, If they taste of our Broth, they may one day come to eat of our Beef. And here let me tell a story: I have heard that a conformable Minister invited a Friend, or Friends, to his House, to eat a piece of Collect-Beef; so he called Beef roasted on the Lord's-day, and kept usually cold in the house all the week; with allusion, 'tis to be supposed, to the Rubrick, which ordinarily enjoyns the Collect for the Lords day, to be read all the week after. I think this Conformists Beef, alike unflavoury expression with the Nonconformists Broth.

Quest. Do not Nonconformists generally reproach and revile the Conformable Ministers for their reading the Common-Prayer, and for their Grave and Decent Habits which they wear; and do not Nonconforming-Ministers teach them so to do?

Ans. If any there be who scorn or mock at grave, godly, sober persons, for their reading the Liturgy, or for their Cassocks, Girdles, and the like, Take them Donatus for me. Suppose some few rude persons should slight a Minister for his Cassock, are there not others that mock and jeer at those that want the Canonical Habits? How many are there that preach not, except they have a sting at Nonconformists? Are not Nonconformists scorned and scoffed at on the Stage, from the Prais and from the Pulpit? How are they jeered at, and made a May-game, by this in name Friendly (but really Unfriendly) Debate. 'Tis to be thought the Author of it did never seriously consider that saying, Non est major confusio quam serii & joci; and that other of my Lord Bacon, That it is an inlet to Atheism to bring the exercise of Religion into contempt, in the persons of sundry Preachers.

chers. For my part, I esteem it a point of serious and solid Godliness, to love, honour, reverence Piety, Gravity, Learning, and true Worth, whether in Conformists or Nonconformists: I look upon it as no good evidence that a man is of the higher form in Religion, to magnifie and multiply the weakneses or miscarriages of a few Dissenters, to the vilifying and reproach of all or the generality of them. As 'tis an argument of an unjust Steward, instead of an hundred to write fourscore or fifty, so is it of a false and bad Accomptant, instead of twenty to set down fifty, fourscore, or an hundred: 'Tis the method and way of God, whom we ought to imitate, to overlook the failings of them that are sincere, to observe and note the little good he sees in his servants, and to pass by or over-look the evil: So the holy Scripture teacheth us in the case and carriage of Sarah to her Husband; of Rahab concerning the Spies; and of the Egyptian Midwives, Exod. 1. 'Tis not the part of a Bee, but of a Flie (we know) and that not of the best sort, to pass over a goodly Garden of sweet Flowers, and at last to light on a gall'd Back, or a heap of Dung. And 'tis but a dirty business to rake the Kennels, and throw dirt in the face of Passengers.

Quest. Hath not the Author of the Debate done worthily, like a vigilant Watchman, foreseeing Danger to King and Kingdom, to alarm both?

both? See Debate, p. 188, 189.

Ans. Far be it from me to call the Author of the Debate, Doeg, Ishmael, or Haman; yet this I may say, (without hazard of Truth or Modesty) That there is false accusation, mocking and scoffing in the Treatise; and there may be something of Haman; or ambition, suspected to be in him, who would insinuate to his Majesty, that 'tis not for his safety, nor for the peace of his Kingdoms, to suffer these Jews, &c. When the bottom of all the uproar may be this, There is perhaps some Mordecai in the Gate or in the Parish, that will not bow down to him. And yet I dare boldly say this, That the Enemy could not countervail the Kings damage, if all the Nonconformists were destroyed, or banished out of the Land.

What a fondness, folly, madness is it to imagine, that men that pretend Godliness, practise sobriety, and who are themselves, and who have their Chests, their All, in the same Ship with his Majesty and the State, should go about to blow it up, or bore holes in it, to sink the Vessel, themselves and all together?

It was the saying of Mr. Calamy (that discreet, honest, pious Mr. Calamy) before he died, That he had rather suffer under a lawful Sovereign, than be preferred under an Usurper. The Loyalty of the Nonconformists hath been experimented now above seven years together, who notwithstanding ing they have suffered the loss of their Places, Callings, Livelihoods, yet in patience possess their Souls, and pray for his Majesty and the Government with all their hearts and souls. As for the high Conformists, I may say to them, when they boast of their Loyalty, (considering the great Honours, Profits, Preferments they enjoy under his Majesty and the Church-Government) If you do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? What do ye more than others? Sinners also do the same.

Quest. Do not the Nonconformists do what they do, onely to act a part, or make a shew? If it be possible, to drain the Peoples Purses, pretending Conscience, but being really moved by carnal Reasons to their present Opinions, Professions, and Practices?

Answ. Some have better (if any have carnal) reasons for their Nonconformity: A hundred, two, or three hundred pound per annum, may likely weigh something with some Conformists too, and might at least help to turn the Scales, when the Judgement was in aequilibrio: And if there be not some weight in this with some, what's the reason that Ministers generally are more conformable than their Parishioners, who have no such weight or byass upon them? As for their Gains by their Nonconformity, I may say they have not the fifth part of what they had formerly; no, not the Tythe of what the Conformists mists have : Some of them are forced to work with their hands, to turn to secular employment. Others, who cannot work nor beg, if others did not work or beg for them, were in danger to starve.

Quest. How could that man pretend Conscience for his Nonconformity, that condemned the Common Prayer, and confessed he had never read it over in all his Life ?

Ans. Perhaps though he had not read it all over, he might have read some of it, and liked not the taste of it. But I put him, (if such a one there was) with those hundreds that subscribed and gave their Assent and Consent to it, and to all and every thing contained therein, before ever they had seen the Book Authorised by Parliament ; it being at that time, if printed, yet not sent down into the several Diocesses where they were to testify their approbation of it.

Quest. Are not Nonconformists a sour and factious sort of Christians, a Generation not at all Sanguine, of Melancholy Tempers, morose, and but bad Companions ?

Ans. They are not all so, nor always so, and some of them not at all so ; and as good Friends and Companions as the World hath any. The Fogs and Damps are in the lower part of the Air and Earth, and the Clouds are in the middle Region ; all is pure and serene, and always so in the upper Region. Christians of the lower

Form, Conformists or Nonconformists, are liable oftentimes to be under Darkness, and under the power of Melancholy for a time : Yet as they advance higher, the Weather is clearer with them ; and ordinarily the more perfect Christian, the more joyful Christian. Yet this may be said for weeping Christians, they may have Joy in their Hearts, when there are Tears in their Eyes ; as the Sun sometimes shines whilst it rains. David, one of the greatest Mourners in Israel, witness his watering his Couch with his Tears, &c. was yet the sweet Singer of Israel. Heaviness endures for a Night, and Joy comes in the Morning. And though Christians sometimes deny themselves, yet God doth never deny them any awful Delight ; nor did God ever make Godly sorrow to destroy mens Bodies (though to help towards the Salvation of their Souls) I have heard that Old Mr. Dod observed , That if Godly Sorrow should have killed any man, it might have most probably been Adams, (the first and none of the least Sinners) because of his Apostacy from God, and Fall from Happiness, he and his Posterity ; yet he lived 30 years.

Quest. Do Nonconformists teach, That Christians must be ever speaking of God in conference with men, or with God in Prayer and Meditation ? Must they have nothing else in their mouths in all Places, Times, and Companies ?

Answ.

Answ. Mr. Shepherd of New-England adviseth not to entertain good thoughts, if they prove a hindrance to a Christian in his particular calling. And Mr. Carter, coming upon one of his neighbours, that was a Tanner, suddenly, and finding him taughing of a Hide; and the man excusing himself for being found so: the Minister answered, I desire Jesus Christ may find me so, when he calls for me, or when he comes, that is, busied about the works of my calling. I grant it is very commendable for persons who have ability, and have time and leisure from business, and are in suitable company, to be often speaking one to another of Christ and of Heaven, and to stir up one another to Faith, Love, and Good-works. God's People did thus in the Prophet Malachy's dayes, (Mal. 3.) and they that did so, are esteem'd God's Jewels; but with us, at least by many amongst us, such kind of persons are as vile (though not so common) as the stones in the street. In other Religions they account of men the more and the better, the more religious they seem to be, and the more precise, strict and punctual they are in the observation of the Rules of their Religion: So the Papists, so the Turks. The Turks account all Fools to be Saints: and many amongst us account all Saints to be Fools, and the greater Saints the greater Fools.

Quest. Are not Nonconformists more precise than wise, in not allowing themselves and others the

the delights of Playes and other divertisments?

Answ. Dr. Heylin in his Geography observes that the Protestant Ministers in France are so trait-laced as not to allow of mixt dancing. The Nonconformists here are not all of this Judgment; they did not, do not use to enquire before persons approach unto the Lord's Table, whether or no, where, when, or how often they have danced? whether they go to see Comedies, &c. I my self have been asked whether Dancing was lawful? I answered, Dancing was lawful; but whether mixt dancing was, they could tell better than I: If it was to them a motive or incitement to evil, to them it was unlawful, else I dare not condemn it as sinful; I will not make more sins than the holy Scripture, and the Light of Nature has discovered to be so.

As for Stage-Playes, if they were reformed and regulated, so as to have no cursing or swearing, nothing of lasciviousness and wantonness, nothing of impiety or prophaness, no putting on of Apparel not belonging to the sex by the Actors, I should look on them as one of the best Recreations; only I would not have seeing of Playes be made a mans work or business, and that which should be but a divertisment be a man's whole imployment: But as they are frequently made and acted (if we may believe reports) they must have stronger Champions than I to throw down the Gantlet, or take it up in their defence.

'Tis well known the Ancient Fathers of the Church, and some reverend and learned men Sons of the Church of England, have condemned them. Dr. Reynolds, Doctor of the Chair at Oxford, (and we are told a Conformist too) wrote against them; Dr. Andrew Rivet (Professor of Divinity, and Tutor to the Prince of Orange, and one that remembered the condition of our Sovereign, when in Exile, in his last hours and Prayers) is no friend to them; And Dr. Fern afterward Bishop of Chester, offered to joyn with some Presbyterian Ministers, in declazing for the sanctification of the Lord's day, and against Stage-playes in the late times. Yet as for those that go to see them, I do not, I dare not therefore judge them no Christians, or no good Christians, because sometimes they are seen in the Theatre, though oftener in the Church: I must confess that that inference [I may see a Picture, therefore a Play] is but weak and dark, and but the shadow of an Argument: For those who condemn such Representations on the Stage, do the like in a Picture; that is, they damn lascivious & wanton Pictures, Books, & Songs as well as Playes. Again, the seeing of a Picture good or bad, hath not (I conceive) such a powerful influence on us, as the acting or personating on the Stage hath; We are not usually so affected by reading of a Book as by hearing a Speech; the voice and action speak louder, and are oft-

er heard, than a dumb shadow or a silent picture. However, to conclude this matter, I think the Author of the Friendly Debate had much better have spent his time in hearing or seeing of Plays, than in writing of that Treatise; yea that he might as well, and to as good purpose have gone about to find out the wandering Jew (he speaks of) as to find Evidence to prove the generality of Nonconformist-Ministers neither good Subjects, nor good Christians.

Quest. What then, do you think that the Author of the F. Debate was not well employed in writing these Books, and in discovering the vanity and childishness of Mr. T. W's Writings, or the falseness and dangerousness of Mr. W. B. his Books to the World?

Answ. As for Mr. T. W. I have heard that he hath written divers useful Books; and I suppose in that Book or Books criticised upon, might have been found matter as well as phrases, and some great as well as little things: and if a man had a mind to carp and cavil at other mens works, as the Author of the Debate doth, he might pull some of the Fathers by the Beards, and tell them also they have written very childishly. All men write not in the same stile and phrase, or in the like method; as all Cooks dress not the same joynt of meat with the same sauce, and garnish not the dish in the same manner when they send it up. And some Readers and Auditors like one way of writing or speaking ; some another ; (else what need such variety of Gifts ?) but all tend to the Edification of the Church. The Scholar is taken with one way of preaching or writing, the Citizen with another, the Countryman with another. Mr. Calvin, Mr. Farrel, Mr. Viret, all three had their Excellencies, one in this way and manner, and another in that : If the Doctrine which is preached or printed, be sound and wholesome what though the stile and phrase be not compleat and polite ? If thy meat be good and savory what though not served up in a Lordly Dish ? I had rather have wholesome Food in an Earthen Platter, than Poyson in a Golden Charger. I suppose all Conformists have not the same low opinion of Mr. T. W. if it be true which I heard that one of them preached one of his Printed Sermons, and that a Citizen his Auditor, after Sermon went to him with a Thank you Mr. Watson for your pains.

Quest. Doth not Mr. W. preach and print dangerous and poisonous Doctrines, such as tend towards Commotion, and disturbance of the publick Peace ?

Ans. If he do, I leave him to apologize for himself, I will be no Advocate in such matters. And if he doth, he is condemned by those of his own way, I mean our Brethren of the Congregational Church ; Twenty nine Ministers of that Judge-

udgement, as to Church-Government, being in nd about the City, published a Renunciation
 nd Declaration against the horrid Insurrection
 nd Rebellion acted by Venner and his Confedeates, to which they subscribed their Names: In onclusion of which, they declare as followeth,
*We cease not to pour out our hearty prayers for all sorts f Blessings, spiritual and temporal, upon the Peron and Government of his Majesty, both in our ongregations, Families, and Retirements; and brough Gods grace, according to our Duties, shall ontinue so to do our selves, and to perswade others
 hereunto; and to live quietly and peaceably, in all odliness and honesty.* And as to the Actings and Resolutions of Venner and his party, they say,
*The Instruments of Cruelty are in their Habitaions. Cursed be their Anger, for it was fierce; and heir Wrath, for it was cruel. And we each one say, y my Soul, come not thou into their Secrets; unto heir Assemblies, mine Honour, be not thou united:
 But let God divide them in Jacob, and scatter them
 n Israel.* Mr. Bridge was not in Town then,
 which may be supposed the Reason we find not his Name amongst the Subscribers.

As for W. B. whether his Writings be so faulty as they are charged to be in the Debates, I cannot tell, having not read them; but a Conformable Doctor told me, that he had searched them, and that the Author of the Debate had dealt disingeniously in his quotations of his, &c.

Quest. May not every whit as much be said for the Papists, why they should be tolerated, as to the publick exercise of their Religion, as for Nonconformists? Do not they profess all Loyalty to his Majesty, and declare against all Rebellion?

Ans. The Papists depend upon a forraign Power in Ecclesiastical Affairs, superiour (as they think) to his Majesty. And it was subscribed by twelve Bishops in Ireland, as follows: The Religion is superstitious and idolatrous, their Faith and Doctrine erroneous and heretical, their Church in respect of both, Apostatical. Whereas the Nonconformists, whether Presbyters or Congregationists agree with the Church of England in the Doctrine of Faith and Sacraments, differ not in any substantial part of Religion from her. What the Papists practice hath been, how dangerous to the Civil Peace, the History of England in Queen Elizabeth's days, can tell us. That 'tis impossible for any Nation to be free from Troubles or Treason, so long as they suffer Jesuites amongst them saith Watson in his Quodlibets. And that he and his Order were not so good and loyal as they pretended, may be guessed from hence, that he himself was afterwards executed for Treason.

Moreover Papists cannot, when they have power, long live without persecuting Protestants saith a Reverend Doctor: Hence may appear that we see K. H. III. of France, stabb'd and damn'd.

ann'd, because he would not persecute them enough.
to the Answer to the Papists Apology, p. 21.

As for Quakers, they may seem to be the very pawn of the Romish Emissaries, profelyted by them, but made more dangerous to Magistrates, and all Civil Society, by this one Principle that they hold, viz. That they ought to be guided and to act, not by the Scripture, nor according to the command of the Civil Magistrate, or Spiritual Guides and Pastors; but by any sudden Flash or Light within them. I am not satisfied to have a hand in the execution of the Sanguinary Laws against Papists, yet should be loth to try how Sanguine or good natur'd they would be, if they had power in their hands to execute the Writ De Heretico comburendo. If we may say of them, (as they seem to say of Fire and Water) They are good Servants; I am sure 'tis as true, That they are but bad Masters.

Quest. How can we agree to live quietly with these Nonconformists? Are they not so much divided from us in their Judgement, that they divide from us in their Language also; and in fine would bring all things into a Babel of Confusion? Cont. p. 1.

Answer. The greater number of them, I presume, speak as others do; and conform to that ordinary phrase, Well, I thank God. If any when enquired of about their Health, say, I am well, through Mercy; they do but as the French Protestants do; they are surely few in comparison that say so commonly; and I do not remember one Minister that useth to say so; they that do, possibly have recovered from some sickness, or escaped some danger, which occasions them to use this expression: But if you will be critical, some think it a sign of a greater humility to say, I am well through mercy, than the other, I am well I thank God; However it is not so liable to exception as to say, I am well y' faith, as I have heard that some Conformists do, although Bishop Saunderson doth not approve of that language in common discourse. We do not hold it unlawful to use the name of God in our Salutations as Boaz did; and can say and pray, God save the King as heartily as your selves. I know no Nonconforming-Ministers that hold it unlawful to teach Children their Catechism & Prayers lest they should take God's Name in vain. And yet I must have leave to say, that a reverend Bishop doth reckon that we sin against the third Commandment, by an irreverend and customary mention of God's great and glorious Name upon trivial occasions; and a learned Doctor in his Exposition of the third Commandment, makes it a duty not to use the Name of God but with great reverence. See Dr. Pat. Catech.

Quest. Are Nonconformists most guilty of breaking the third Commandment in the main sense? See Cont. p. 4.

Ans.

Answ. Mr. Case, Mr. Edwards, and the London Ministers (cited by the Author of the Debate in his Continuation) all prove they were very tender of the breach of an Oath, desirous to keep far from it themselves, and to save others, with fear plucking them out of the fire; and the present ejected and dejected estate of the Nonconformists may testify, that they are such as fear an Oath. The Presbyterians are bold to say in one of their Papers to his Majesty, That the Obligation of the Covenant upon the Consciences of the Nation, was not the weakest Instrument of his Return. As to your citations out of Mr. John Goodwyn and Mr. John Lilborne, I say there lyeth an Exception against the Witnesses in the Case; as I suppose you might say, if their Testimonies were produced against the Hierarchy, Liturgy, and Ceremonies.

Quest. What may be the cause the Author of the Debate is so fierce against the Protestation taken by the Parliament before the War, and which his late Majesty excepted not against when taken, although he was then at Whitehall?

Answ. The true Reason may be this; because the House of Commons put out an Interpretation, that by the Doctrine of the Church of England, which they promised to maintain, they meant onely the Doctrine in opposition to Popery and Popish Innovations, and did not thereby oblige themselves or others to the maintenance of the Discipline and Government.

vernment. If that had been in, 'tis to be thought it would have gone down as easily with men of his way, as the Et-cetera Oath did, concerning which the Historian gives us this account; That some Bishops pressed it on Ministers before the day required to take it by the Canon, and enjoyned them to take it kneeling; a Ceremony not exacted or observed in taking the Oath of Alleagiance and Supremacy. Full.Hist. 6. II. p. 17.

Quest. What is to be thought of the Continuation of the Friendly Debate?

Ans. It seems to be an unfriendly Continuation of Debate and Strife, contrary to the Act of Indempnity, and to be a continued breach of that Law in the very design of it; Else, why, contrary to the Act of Oblivion, doth he rake up the memory of what was written and preached before and in the Wars, and that sometimes by persons very little considerable for their parts, learning, or place amongst their own party? and why doth he charge those things upon the Nonconformists of this Generation?

Quest. Were not Nonconformists even from the beginning of Nonconformity generally very peevish, impudent, censorious, and disobedient to Authority?

Ans. The Old Puritans (if we believe the Historian, and he was a Conformist and a Dignitary) were humble, meek, patient, hospitable, charitable, as in his Censures of, so in his Alms to, others.

Authors. Dr. Full. H. 6. 11. 220. And if we believe the Author of the Debate, the Ancient Nonconformists were (many of them) men of sober and peaceful principles, and did submit to Authority, and were enemies to Separation; such were Mr. Ball, Mr. Geere, and all those who were the Authors of that grave and modest Confutation of the Error and Sect of the Brownists, or Separatists, published by Mr. Rathband.

Quest. Have not some of the High Sons of the Church changed their Principles in relation to King and Parliament?

Answer. Time was when they pleaded strongly, Where the Word of a King is there is power: But lately when his Majesty published a Declaration about Ecclesiastical Affairs, &c. then their note was changed; That was no Law (they said) and the King could not do it without the Parliament. And yet then the House of Commons gave his Majesty thanks for doing it. Time was when a Long Parliament was accounted by them a grievous Disease, and now it is the great Remedy. Time was when they cryed down all Parliaments; now they cry up this. Whence comes this change? I answer, The case is alter'd, quoth Ployden.

Quest. Is this good Logick, or solid reasoning; Mr. Lewes Hughes, Mr. Vicars, Mr. Bridges did write thus and thus in the War-time; Ergo, or therefore the Nonconformists at present are all thus and thus?

Answer

Answ. I deny the Consequence, as the Author of the Debate would, and well might. If a man should argue thus: Mr. White set out a Book of a hundred (which he called) Scandalous Ministers that were ejected by the Parliament: If we grant some of those hundred were scandalous, therefore all that were ejected in those dayes, were scandalous. Or thus: They say one Wallis of Gloucester published a Book of scandalous words and deeds of perhaps twenty or thirty now Conformable Ministers; therefore if some of them were guilty, all that conform are faulty in like manner.

Quest. Is it an argument or evidence of eminent Godliness, and of extraordinary Charity, to charge thousands with Errors or miscarriages of half a dozen or half a score?

Answ. No. God, who is Love it self, would have spared Sodom for the sake of ten righteous persons. And surely our enemies when they are serious and sober, and their passions not predominant, both of old and of late, might find (if they would look about) more than ten righteous persons, godly, meek, modest, charitable and peaceable among the Nonconformists. In the beginning of the Reformation, there were a sort of Anabaptists rose up in Germany, and did horrid things at Munster and elsewhere; was the fault therefore in the Reformation? Although the Papists use to charge it upon the Protestant Religion, ligion, that it is the Spring and Fountain of Sedition and Rebellion where it is received ; Yet both We, and our Brethren Conformists, are able to wipe off that foul aspersion ; and so are the Nonconformists of these dayes, the dirt that is thrown in their faces by the aforesaid Author. If any have called Conformists Egyptians, Babylonians, Canaanites, Antichristians, or the like, let it not be charged on those that disapprove and condemn their sayings. If any speak in the Clouds, and you fancy they challenge to themselves a power by Prayer to rain down Blood upon us, let it not be charged upon them that live quietly and peaceably in the Land, & teach men to do by their life and doctrine, if they preach at all, If there be any man that designs by preaching or otherwise, to throw the Nation into War and Blood again, I wish he may prophesie in Sackcloth ; And when he pretends to pour out Vials of Wrath, his threatnings may be like water spilt upon the ground.

Quest. Do Nonconformists look shortly to shut Heaven, and turn Waters into Blood ? C.

Answ. Mr. Parker of New-England printed a Book on Daniel's Visions and Prophecies, Anno 1646. and according to him there will be no shutting of Heaven, no turning of Waters into Blood, at least no putting off of the Witnesses Sackcloth (which saith our Author (Contin. of Fr. Deb. p. 142.) Mr. W. B. now expects) till the year year 1856. when we shall be all, Conformists and Nonconformists, at peace in our Graves. If Mr. W. B. discourse of such Prophecies in his Sermons, I assure you he and one more are all that I can hear of, that meddle to preach on such subjects. I am told, Those that preach in private, preach Faith and Repentance, and meddle not with matters relating to the Government either of Church or State. And I was lately asking a prime Nonconformist, and an able Preacher, what he said to that Objection in the Debate, that the Nonconformists did not preach up Obedience to Magistrates? He very zealously and confidently replied, They did it, and that more than the Conformists themselves.

Quest. Do not the Conformists, some of them meddle sometimes with the interpreting and applying phrases and notions they meet with in the Revelations?

Answ. Bishop Williams, Bishop of Ossory, wrote a Book to prove the Long Parliament Antichrist; and he or another made Oliver Cromwell Antichrist; and Dr. Fuller in his Church-History, writes of one that observed that the Covenant had in it the Number of the Beast, One hundred sixty six; consisting, as he said, of just so many words.

Quest. Were not the old Nonconformists much better then those in our days? Col.

Answ. Their Nonconformity did not cost them

them so much as it doth us ; and in the times they lived, they were likely accused as we are now : When we are as they now, really (as well as Legally) dead, it may be we may have a good word also.

In Queen Elizabeth's days the Nonconformists were not more pliant or complying, than they are now. There were not the Tythe of the Ministers then ejected, to what since. There were more bitter Books put out then against the Hierarchy, than are now. If I mis-remember not, the Nonconformists gave the first Charge then, but now-a-days we are alarm'd and assaulted once and again, and no man appeared publicly to defend our Principles or Practices. We are loaded with Reproaches, and many grievous and heavy things laid to our charge, and no man for a long time in our name in print so much as pleaded Not Guilty, and offered to Traverse the Indictment, or put himself upon the Tryal of his Country. Say not therefore that the Nonconformists of former times were better, more peaceable, more modest then these.

If any man, though in the heat of his passion, and in the heat of the War, have called the Conformists Gentiles, Uncircumcised, Philistines, Egyptians, Babylonians, the Brood of the Serpent, and have denied pardon of sin and Heaven to them because of their Conformity, I think he ought to repent of such hard sayings, and uncharitable ritable Censures of his Brethren and Fellow-servants, and to bring forth Fruits meet for Repentance for the time to come, viz. To lay a Law of Love and Kindness upon his Tongue and Pen, as long as he lives. 'Tis to be hoped the number of those that had such unbridled Tongue and Pens, was very small; the instances you bring of such intemperate heats, and irregular zeal, are taken out of the Furnace of the late War; and that too, after the fire had been raked up in Ashes by many years peace, and fully quenched by the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity. If we had a mind to recriminate and retaliate, we could repeat much foul Language, and bitter reviling speeches, by some of your way against us also. But these are not the methods of Peace. I desire therefore that all such matters may be forgiven and forgotten on both sides, and remembered onely or chiefly by the Authors and Abettors of them, that they may, if they have not already, repent of them more than in Dust and Ashes.

Quest. Did not the Scots in Ireland write to their Brethren in Scotland to send over Ministers to them, in such language, as if they thought there had been but little of Religion amongst them in that Countrey, during the Reign of the Bishops? C.

Ans. There might be many dark Corners in Ireland for want of Oyl to maintain Lamps, preaching ching Ministers I mean, such as should be like John Baptist, burning and shining Lights amongst them. The Scottish Presbyterians, if they be like their Brethren in England, had a Reverend esteem of Archbishop Usher, and the Bishops of Ireland, for the Irish Articles of Religion, and their zeal against the toleration of Popery there. Who or what was the cause of the scarcity of able Ministers, except want of Maintenance, and fear of the Irish Papists, I know not; but confident I am, the Bishops of Armagh and Aradagh were not, if any other Bishops.

Quest. Have not the Nonconformists a high conceit of themselves, and those of their own way, and a low esteem of all others for Religion and Godliness? Doth not Mr. Baynes say, There is more of God and his Religion in some one Congregation of a silenced Minister, than in all the Bishops Families in England? And doth not Dr. Ames approve that of Mr. Baynes?

Ans. I have heard that Dr. Ames had so much charity for Corvixus, that he said, He did not doubt but to meet him in Heaven: Why then Mr. Baynes passeth, and Dr. Ames approveth such a smart Censure on the Bishops Families, I cannot tell. Yet 'tis not to be imagined that Mr. P. Baynes meant that the Bishops had no Religion in their Families; If so, I cannot commend his Charity. I think this is a sure and clear truth, That neither Bishops nor silenced Ministers can be said to have all Religion or no Religion amongst them and their Followers. I hold a Monopoly in Religion as unlawful, as some have thought those in the State illegal. Nevertheless it must be confessed, That the Articles of Visitation, or the Injunctions of the Great Apostle St. Paul, are Canonical: A Bishop must rule his own House well; for if a man know not how to rule his own House, how shall he take care of the Church of God? 1 Tim. 3, 4, 5. He that writes the Life of Archbishop Usher, tells us, That he had four times a day Prayer in his House; that there was an hour spent in Catechising once a Week, viz. every Fryday; that he had on the Lords day in the Evening the Sermon which he preached in the Morning, repeated in his Chappel by one of his Chaplains. This was the way to have a Church in his House. All Bishops do not write after this Canon, nor this Copy. I know a Minister, a learned, sober, and zealous Conformist, that after he had been with his Diocesan, at his House or Palace, to subscribe; came home with a sad heart, and professed it was not for any thing he had done, but for the prophaness and disorder he observed in the Bishops Family amongst his Servants. 'Tis to the great commendation of the present Archbishop of Canterbury, that which is reported of him, That he keeps a good House; that is, in Bishop Goodman's Dialect, he spends Church-Means in a Churchly manner: And that he

he keeps a well-govern'd House, allows not Debauchery; if a Servant be drunk once, there's no place for a second Error. If so, it must be acknowledged that there is Discipline in that School, where nothing saves but a primum tempus.

Quest. Doth his Majesties Coronation-Oath to protect the Bishops and their Priviledges to his power, (as every good King in his Kingdoms in right ought to protect and defend the Bishops and Churches under their Government) hinder his Majesty, that he may not regulate the Jurisdiction of Bishops, or remove the controverted Ceremonies out of the Church?

Ans. Hear Mr. Gere, one whom the Author of the Friendly Debate calls a discreet Presbyterian: The King, saith he, is sworn to maintain the Laws of the Land in force at his Coronation; and yet 'tis not unlawful after to abrogate any, upon the motion, or with the consent of his Parliament. The King is bound to maintain the Rights of the Clergy, whilst they continue such; but if any of their Rights be abrogated by just Power, he stands no longer engaged in that particular. If any Priviledges of the Clergy, prove prejudicial or contrariant to the Laws and Liberties and Priviledges of the People, which the King is bound to maintain, the King may lawfully relieve his other Subjects, by passing such Bills as may take away such Priviledges. His Majesties Oath first made to his Subjects in general, being lawful, cannot be voided or superseded by his after-Oath to the Clergy. And as for the Laws about Ceremonies, they are not like those of the Medes and Persians, unchangable; but may be changed, and the Rites and Ceremonies now in use, may be abolished by the same power by which they were here established.

Quest. Did the Nonconformists generally make Addresses formerly to Oliver Cromwel and Richard Cromwel?

Answ. For my own part, I never made any Address to O. C. or R. C. And the onely Address that the Presbyterian-Ministers of the City of London, made to O. C. was for the saving the Life of Dr. Hewit. As for Addresses to R. C. divers Now-Conformists as well as Nonconformists, did joyn in them, as they did also generally to General Monk for a Free Parliament in Order to his Majesties Restoration.

Quest. Are not all Laws once made, rigorously to be put in execution necessarily, and especially Laws concerning Ecclesiastical Affairs?

Answ. Laws that are lawful and necessary to the Esse or Being of the Church or State, are doubtless to be put in execution; not so those always, that tend to Order and Decency. Supreme Governours may, upon just occasion, forbear inflicting the Penalties upon Offenders against penal Statutes. Yea Excommunication, that that Great Church-Censure, may be suspended, when the major part of a Church are infected with some Errour, or are guilty of some scandalous offence, the end of Laws Ecclesiastical and Civil, being the peace of Church and State; where the execution of Laws may occasion more harm than good, more disquiet than peace, there the supreme Power may for a time wave the exact and rigorous execution of them. His Majesty in his Declaration to all his loving Subjects, Decemb. 26. 1662. published by the Advice of his Privy Council, conceives the power of dispensing with the Penalty (upon those who living peaceably do not Conform) to be inherent in him. Some Laws are made in terrorem, like Rods in a School. 'Tis not intended that every Offender and every Offence should be presently punished, according to the utmost severity of them. The Common Law in some Cases seems to need a Chancery, to moderate the rigor of it, lest that summum jus, prove summa injuria. He who will not allow his Majesty to save some by his Prerogative, who are cast by the Law, robs him of a principal Flower of his Crown, his very Crown and Glory, and that is, His CLEMENCY.

Quest. Were not the Old Puritans, as they used to call the Nonconformists, Enemies to the Kings Supremacy?

Ans. In a Treatise of Learned Mr. Bradshaw, who

who wrote of Justification, there is a Protestation by them made of the Kings Supremacy, in these words: We hold and maintain the same Authority and Supremacy in all Causes, and over all Persons, Civil and Ecclesiastical, granted to Queen Elizabeth, to be due in full and ample manner (without any limitation or qualification) to the King and his Heirs and Successors for ever. Neither is there, to our knowledge, any one of us but hath been most willing to subscribe and swear unto the same, according to form of Statute. And we desire that those that shall refuse the same, may bear their own Iniquity.

Quest. Were not the Nonconformists in former times disobedient to the Laws? And did they not refuse to conform out of humour and stubbornness, and not out of Conscience?

Ans. The same Mr. Bradshaw in the same Treatise, protests in their Name, as followeth. We never refused Obedience to any Laws or Commandments of the King or State whatsoever, but onely to such as we have proved, or are ready to prove if we might be heard, to be contrary to the Word of God. And we are ready to take our solemn Oath before the Throne of Justice, That the onely Cause of our refusal of Obedience to those Canons of the Prelates, for which we are at present so extremely afflicted, is meer Conscience, and a fear to sin against God. And if by due form of Reasoning, we may be convinced in our Consciences of the contrary, we

we as willing as any Subjects in the Realm to obey
and conform.

Quest. But is it at all material what the Nonconformists swear? are not our present Nonconformists guilty of taking God's Name into their mouths backward and forward, and never blush? Wid. Contin. p. 18.

Answ. It was the conscience of an Oath, and care to prevent the great guilt of Perjury, that made Dr. Hill, one of the late Assembly, when Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, and the University in those dayes, to insert those explanatory
clauses in the Oaths of those who took degrees,
*Viz. Jurabis te hac omnia & reliqua Academiae Statuta (quatenus ipsa ad te spectant) vel fideliter
observasse & observaturum, vel monitiones, correcti-
ones & penas dictorum Statutorum transgressoribus
incumbentes, sine contradictione quacunq; humili-
ter subiisse aut subiturum, ni sialiter per gra-tiam per Academiam concessam dispensatum tecum
fuerit, sicut Te Deus adjuvet, &c.* and again, *Se-natus Cantabrigiensis decrevit & declaravit eos om-nes qui monitionibus, correctionibus & penis Sta-tutorum, Legum Decretorum, Ordinationum, In-junctionum & Laudabilium Consuetudinum hu-
jus Academiae transgressoribus, quovis modo Incum-bentibus humiliter se submiserint, nec esse, nec ha-bendos esse perjuri reos.* By which clauses 'tis manifest; that either active or passive obedience to the Statutes, Orders and Customs of the Universities did save from the guilt of Perjury. And confident I am that 'tis the fear of an Oath that is the chief cause why many suffer the loss of their Livings at this day.

Quest. Is there not a good riddance of so many Mr. Scruples out of the Church? And is there any want of able Preachers up and down in the Country now they are ejected?

Ans. My Lord Bacon in his dayes, though there was a scarcity of able Preachers, and yet there were not the tythe perhaps of Ministers silenced then, to what are now. And he thought then that the silencing of the Ministers for their Nonconformity was a punishment of the People rather than of the Minister. He conceived there also that such Subscriptions might have been forbore as occasioned the silencing of divers of those Ministers. Conf. ab Eccl. Aff.

Quest. What if there were many places made void by the ejection of Nonconformists, may not those places be well filled by Conforming-Pluralists?

Ans. My Lord Bacon saith, In case the number of able Ministers were sufficient, and the value of the Benefices were sufficient, then Pluralities were in no sort tolerable. And as for Nonresidents, except it be just of necessary absence, he saith, it seemeth to be an abuse drawn out of covetousness and sloth; for that men should live of the Flock they do not feed, or at the Altar whereat they do not serve,

is a thing that can hardly receive just defence. And to exercise the Office of a Pastor in matter of Word and Doctrine by deputation is a thing not warranted. So he in his Treatise dedicated to King James about Ecclesiast. Affairs. For my own part, I think the Poligamy of the Fathers, or the Patriarchs of old, as excusable as the Spiritual Polygamy of many of the Sons of our Church. And to serve Cures of Souls meerly by Proxies and Deputies (besides that it may seem to strengthen the Pope's plea for Universal Pastors) whilst so many stand idle in the Market-place, able and willing to take care of those Souls, is a thing I shall not take upon me to justify.

Let me add this also, that 'tis one Objection which hath been formerly made against the Liturgy, That it occasions an ignorant, dumb, and a lazy Ministry, but were it not for Pluralities and Non-residency and insufficient Livings, there might be no place for such objection.

The Author of the Debate tells us in his Continuation, p. 383. that at first the chief promoters of stinted Liturgies were renowned for their constant and unwearied preaching every day in the week, and sometimes twice; and as probably this was one thing that advanced the credit and esteem of Liturgies in former times: As I am perswaded one great cause why many do not esteem of the Liturgy so much now, is, that so many great Conformists and sticklers for it are Pluralists and Nonresidents; and divers of them either preach not at all, or very seldom; and then too, some of them preach against Preaching, and saw down the branch of that Tree upon which they stand so high above their Brethren. And on the other side, those who scruple some things in the Liturgy and Ceremonies, are such constant and zealous Preachers, and that when Bonds and Imprisonments abide them for their so doing.

Quest. But is it not indeed the Bond of the Covenant, the Scottish Covenant, wherewith our English Presbyterians have bound their Souls, the great or onely Cause that makes so many Nonconformists?

Ans. The Covenant mentioned was not the cause of the War; the Battel at Edge-hill was fought before the Covenant came into England. And whereas the Covenant was enter'd into in Forty Two, and Forty Three, there have been Nonconformists ever since Bishop Hooper, and the Reformation in King Edward the Sixth's days. There are some amongst the Covenanters that can conform to the Liturgy, and submit to Episcopall Government. And the greater part of Nonconformists Preachers at this day, never took the Covenant.

Quest. What is the reason that divers Nonconformists read Logick in private Houses? Is not this contrary to their Oath taken in the University? Cont. p. 10. edit. 4.

Ans.

Answ. I have consulted as able as any in the Universities (and by their Offices as likely to know as any) about the matter, and am told, That the Oath there prohibits the setting up of another University in Opposition to the Universities, and Reading in order to the taking Degrees elsewhere. The words are at Oxford, They shall not solemnnes Lectiones resumere; which doth not make Dr. Busby perjured for initiating his Scholars some time in Logick before they go to the University, Nor the several Professors at Gresham-Colledge, who read as solemn Lectures surely, as a Nonconformist doth in a private house. Besides, I hear but of one Nonconformist that at present doth teach Youth in that manner privately.

Quest. What security can his Majesty and the Parliament have, that Nonconformists will not (under pretence of Conscience or Covenant) seditiously endeavour an Alteration of Church-Government; but that they will live quietly and peaceably in their places.

Answ. They are ready to give the ancient Legal-Security, the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy; and that is more than the Papists will do, and as much as is required of the generality of the rest of the Nation, notwithstanding their having taken the Engagement in the late times, which yet many Presbyterians, nay Nonconformists and Ejected Ministers, would never do, though though some of them lost their Places for their refusal. Moreover many of them since have taken an Oath not to endeavour any Alteration of Government in Church and State, and yet are not trusted to preach publicly, much less to enjoy any Ecclesiastical Benefice. And the rest that scruple some words or phrases in that Oath, are yet ready, besides the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, to swear that they will live quietly and peaceably in their places, and not under colour or pretence of the Covenant, or any pretence whatever, endeavour by force, or seditiously and tumultuously, any Alteration of Government in Church and State.

Quest. Is the Act of Uniformity, and the Oxford Act, to be strictly and rigorously pressed upon, and executed on all transgressors?

Answ. If it be, then what will become of many Conformists who use other Rites and Ceremonies than what are by Law required? and of them who use other Forms of Prayer then are there prescribed; and of all those Ministers that do not reade the Common-Prayer either publicly or privately, morning and evening; and so those Lecturers who do not monthly reade their Assent & Consent? &c. And as for the Oxford Act & Oath, I have heard from a very learned person, a Conformist, that the Bishops themselves come within the compass of it, as many as have not assented and consented, &c. as oft as they they came within five miles of their Sees, or any other Corporation. This I say, not to bring the Bishops within, but to bring others out of the reach of that Act; or rather to encline, if it may be, our Fathers and Brethren to use their interest with his Majesty and Parliament to remove those Laws which are a Partition-wall betwixt the Conformist & Nonconformist.

Quest. But are not the Nonconformists sinners and transgressors of the Divine Law, as oft as they withdraw from actual communion with the Church of England, being (as many of them confess) a true Church?

Ans. Many of our learned Doctors hold Rome to be a true Church; as a Woman is a true Woman, though an Harlot; and a Man a true Man, though overspread with Leprosie. And yet being we cannot actually hold external communion with them, without either subscribing to many false Tenets, or joyning in a corrupt and Idolatrous Service, we withdraw from them without sin. Our withdrawing is not to be charged with sin or schism, although too we were the minor part who withdrew, and against the determination of a pretended General Council. And I believe it would be a hard matter to prove that many of those Meetings, which are now commonly called Conventicles, want any of the essential requisites to a true Church, and yet do not think themselves Schismatics for not holding

ing actual communion with them, because not countenanced by the Law. And if a Legal Establishment be absolutely necessary to the being of a true Christian Church, then there was no true Church at Rome till Constantine's dayes; which I suppose you will judge very unreasonable to assert.

Quest. Is it possible there should be Unity without Uniformity in Rites and Ceremonies, &c.

Ans. Yes. There is Unity amongst the Protestant Reformed Churches beyond the Seas, that follow Calvin, and yet divers forms of Prayer, and divers Rites. The Author of the Debate will not take it well, if a man should not say, there is Unity at home amongst Conformists, and yet the Cathedrals and Country-Parish-Churches differ in some Rites, and in their mode of Worship; and in the Parish-Churches there are diversity of Ceremonies and Usages in the Worship of God. In some Churches they stand up at the Hymns, in others not; In some they read the Hymns and Psalms Minister and People antiphonally, in others not: In some, in most, they read the Prayer for Christs Catholick Church, if at all, before Sermon, but I know where 'tis constantly read after. And it is well known that none boast more of Unity than the Romanists, and yet in several Countries they have several Rites, Customs, and Priviledges: and in England

England before the happy Reformation, the Service was ad modum Sarum, and ad modum Bangor, different in divers Churches.

Quest. Is it not necessary to appoint the same Vestures and Gestures for the Worship of God, to avoid difference and confusion?

Ans. There is no Gesture or Ceremony prescribed in the singing of Psalms, and yet People generally are bare and reverend in that exercise.

The late Canons in 1640. leave Bowing towards the East or Altar indifferent; and would not have those that do it, to judge those that do it not; nor those that do it not, to judge those that do it. Now what greater inconvenience would follow, if the same moderation and liberty to practise differently, were used as to the Cross, Surplice, and Kneeling at the Sacrament of the Lords Supper?

If there must be absolute and universal Uniformity in the Worship of God amongst the Worshipers, then all must alike have their Faces one way, must wear all Garments of the same fashion and colour. In the late Times, when the Liturgy and Ceremonies were disused, there were not a quarter of those private Meetings that have been since. The number of them that separated from the Publick Worship, were very small in comparison; I suppose not ten to an hundred. The Author of the Debate, I guess, and and hundreds, if not thousands, of Conformists, did not hold themselves bound, notwithstanding the Laws for Liturgy and Ceremonies, to absent themselves from the then Publick Worship, and assemble privately, that they might uphold Uniformity in Forms of Prayer, Rites and Ceremonies. Whence we may reasonably conclude, That they thought Gods Publick Worship might be carried on without Uniformity in these things: And again, That the omission of things required by Law, is not judged so great a sin as is by them pretended.

Answ. The Presbyterians both old and modern are against Separation: They deny that they separate from you; for upon occasion they joy with you in Ordinances, and if you remove some things wherewith your Worship is clogg'd, they would joyfully communicate constantly with you. The present partial and temporary withdrawing, as to some Acts of Worship, is not to be charged with Schism. If you hold forth communion with your Church as in the Apostles days, with a Liturgy sufficiently corrected without Symbolical Ceremonies, without such Oaths, Declarations and Subscriptions, they will come into your Bosom, though you not onely cast them out of your Lap, but thrust them out of your House,

House, and shut the Doors upon them. As we justify the Church of England from Schism, notwithstanding our Separation from Rome; so the Nonconformists will endeavour to justify their withdrawings in some Acts, and for a time only, by reason of the terms of Communion imposed on them. That they are for Reformation, not Separation, may be hence concluded, That in a late project for Peace and Agreement, this was one Proposition given in by the Presbyterians themselves, That whosoever should be capable of any Employment, should profess to hold Communion with the Church of England, and to the uttermost of his power to promote the Peace and Happiness thereof. And when there was a difference betwixt Presbyterians and their Brethren, commonly called Independents, formerly, there was a Conference before a Committee of Parliament betwixt them, in which the Presbyterians (as I am credibly informed) offered either to give or take: that is to say, They would take the Establishment, and allow their Brethren of the Congregational-way a well-regulated Toleration; or let their Brethren take the Establishment, and allow the Presbyterians such a Toleration. And one of the chief of them, when the London-Ministers waited on his Majesty at the Hague, when discourse was about Ecclesiastical Affairs, earnestly moved his Majesty, that he would please to think of a way to indulge them a Liberty, though they should not be comprehended in the Publick Establishment, as it was then hoped the Presbyterian would have been.

In brief, the Presbyterians disclaim Separation; they are willing to have Union and Communion with the Church of England, upon Christian and friendly Terms: And they desire the like Liberty and Toleration from the Bishops, that they were willing and ready to have shewed to their Brethren of the Congregational Way: Yea, they would bless God and our Governours, if they might have the like Favours and Liberties that Dr. Gunning, Dr. Wild, Dr. Hide, and others the Non-Conformists had in former times.

Quest. If the Presbyterians are willing to conform to a Liturgy, and to this Liturgy when sufficiently corrected; yet what hopes is there that ever there should be any Alteration or Reformation of it, which will satisfie or please them, so as to use it?

Ans. Yes, there is such a draught already made, to the great content of the chief of the Presbyterians; and this done by three Reverend persons, all Conformists: And which I hope may be produced, when ever Authority shall please to command it.

Quest. Would it not be accounted a weak thing to yeild or condescend, though never so little, if this might be a means to cement and soder us together again.

Ans.

Ans. It was the prudence of the ancient Church to satisfy the Joannites, who had kept Conventicles apart from the Church for thirty years, being disgusted at the dishonour done to John Chrysostom their Bishop or Pastor; and this the Church did, by restoring his honour after he was dead. - Socrat. Eccles. Hist.

Quest. Why should the Church of England remove the Ceremonies which she hath retained since the Reformation? May she not thereby disgust and offend the Romanists, to please the Nonconformists, which they call Puritans rather than Protestants?

Ans. These Ceremonies were at first retained and continued when others were cast out of the Church in hopes to bring the Papists to a compliance with our Church: But Archbishop Usher, as he that writes his Life informs us, upon occasion declared his Judgement concerning them, That experience of many years hath shewed that this condescension hath rather hardened them in their Error, than brought them to a liking of our Religion; this being their usual saying, If our Flesh be not good, why do you drink of our Broth? If the Church stick close to the Ceremonies, she is not like to gain our Adversaries the Romanists to our Communion; if she lay aside the Ceremonies, she may gain thousands and ten thousands of our Brethren to our Church again. That they may do thus, God grant that the same mind might be in all our Bishops, that was in Christ Jesus, the chief Shepherd and Bishop of our Souls; that they may love and feed their Sheep, and be ready to lay down their lives for their Sheep; and then their Yoak will be easie, and their Burden light. Or that was in the blessed Apostle Paul, on whom was the Care of all the Churches; who professeth of himself, I became all things to all men, that by any means I might win some. Or else that was in this Godly Archbishop Usher, of whom 'tis recorded in his Life, That though he conformed himself, yet he desired that his Majesty would not impose the English Ceremonies on the Irish Church; saying, If I had all mens Consciencs in my keeping, I could in these disputable Cases give Laws unto them as well as my self: But 'tis one thing what I can do, and another thing what other men must do. Since the Ceremonies be things (saith our Church) in their own nature indifferent, and yet by some held superstitious and unlawful, it seemeth to fall within the Apostles Rule, which is, That the strong do descend and yeild to the weaker; if we will hearken to the Counsel of the Lord Chancellor Bacon, in his Considerations touching the Church of England.

Quest. Doth the holy Scripture caution us againstt grieving our Brethren, as well as againstt offending of them, so as to occasion them to stumble and fall into sin?

Ans.

Ans. 'Tis our duty not onely to prevent our Brothers fall, but his fears ; and to keep his heart from sinking, as well as his feet from falling. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak : I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some, 1 Cor. 9. 22. 'Tis the part of a good Shepherd to carry the Lambs in his Arms, and gently to lead the Ewes that are great with young ; and of Nursing Fathers and Mothers, to be tender-hearted and tender-handed towards Babes, towards weak and young Children. If it be said, We must not grieve or vex the Magistrate : I answer, 'Tis true, we must not ; but if the Magistrate please to remove the Law ; where there's no Law, there's no Disobedience ; and then the Offence ceaseth : And where there's no Offence committed by the Inferiour, there should be no Offence taken by the Superiour ; or when there is none given, there should be none taken. The things are alterable in themselves. The Magistrate is a Minister of God for good ; and if he shall please to remove every stumbling-stone and grieving-thorn out of the way to the Church, and out of the way of Obedience, How shall God and his people bless him ? All the power that the Church hath, it is to edification, and not to destruction ; and there's a far greater necessity of Unity, than of Uniformity : 'Tis a great deal better, not to make Canons, than to make such as we fore-see will be broken by thousands, and that under a pretence of Conscience; and who are serious, sober, civil people in their Lives and Conversations.

Quest. What may be thought the readiest way to make the Bishops work easie, and his person to be beloved?

Answ. 'Tis I think to use Moderation, to rule with Love, and not with Rigor; and that notwithstanding some young Counsellors, some Hot spurs, may advise them, as of old the young men did Rehoboam; when their Brethren come to them, and say, Your Fore-fathers (or your Predecessors divers of them) made our Yoke grievous. Now therefore make ye, we pray you, the grievous Service of your Fore-fathers, and their heavy Yoke which they put upon us, lighter, and we will serve you: To say to them, Our little Finger shall be heavier than our Fore-fathers Loyns; and now whereas they did lade you with a heavy Yoke, we will adde to your Yoke: Our Fore-fathers chastised you with Whips, but we will chastise you with Scorpions. The deeper you lay the Foundation in Humility and the broader in Charity, the higher you may probably build your House, and it may likewise stand the longer. A well-grounded Jus Humani, may stand longer than a high-built pretended Jus Divinum. And Reason shews, saith one, that Episcopacy will stand more firm in conjunction with Presbytery, than by it self alone. There be two circumstances, saith my Lord Chancellor

Chancellor Bacon, wherein I could never be satisfied ;
 be one, the sole exercise of their Authority ; the other, the deputation of their Authority. For the first, he saith, surely I do suppose (and I think upon good ground) that ab initio non fuit ita. And that the Deans and Chapters were Counsels about the Seas and Chairs of Bishops at the first, and were unto them a Presbytery or Consistory. And again, we see that the Bishop of Rome (Fas est & ab hoste doceri, and no question in that Church the first Institutions were excellent) performeth all Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, in Consistory, with advice, that is,
 of the Cardinals or Parish-Priests of Rome. And hereof again (saith he) we see divers shadows yet remaining : as that the Dean and Chapter proformât chooseth the Bishop, which is the highest point of Jurisdiction.

Again, The same Author tells us, that the Bishop is a Judge, and of a high nature ; Whence cometh it that he should depute, considering that all trust and confidence is personal and inberent, and cannot or ought not to be transposed ? surely in this again ab initio non fuit ita : But it is probable that Bishops when they gave themselves too much to the glory of the World, and became Grandees in Kingdoms, and great Counsellors to Princes, then did they leave their proper Jurisdiction, as things of too inferior a nature for their greatness ; And then after the similitude and imitation of Kings and Counts-Palatine, they would have their Chancellors and Judges.

Quest. Is the Author of the Fr. Debate so extraordinary zealous, as he pretends, for the honour of our Governours and Government in the State?

Answ. See pag. 50, 51. of the Continuation, where he doth insinuate, or more plainly inform the Nation, that not only Nonconformists keep Conventicles, but that Mass is said, and that the Papists take the same liberty in the exercise of their Religion as the Nonconformists do in theirs. And that little or no notice is taken of any Drunkards, Swearers, or Blasphemers. If he had pleased, 'tis to be thought he might have found great sins amongst the Clergy, little taken notice of, and not much punished in Ecclesiastical Courts. If he had done like Shem and Japhet, to have rather endeavoured to cover his nakedness, he might have been blessed by them; or else, if he will needs have his jerks at Nonconformists, though it light partly on his and our Superiors in the State, to have gone on, and have whipped the Buyers and Sellers in, out of the Temple also.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists teach the people railing language, particularly to call all they like not, Antichristian and Babylonish? Vid. Contin., p. 155, & 266, &c.

Answ. Time was when Reverend and Renowned Mr. Vines (that lost the Mastership of Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, because he would not

not subscribe the Engagement ; as did also Dr. Spurstow the Master of Katherine-Hall, and Mr. Young of Jesus--Colledge for the same cause) preaching before the Parliament, said, Henceforward he should take Antichrist for a better man than ever he thought him to be, there were so many good things charged upon him. And another Presbyterian, now a Nonconformist, preaching to the same Auditors, preached that Antichristian and Babylonian, were terms sooner imputed or charged, than proved.

But if the Nonconforming-Ministers or People were yet ignorant, and to seek for scoffing and reviling language, they might have a Dictionary of such hard words out of the Friendly Debate. If there be in Private-meetings that use railing and reviling speeches (as too many too often have in publick Congregations) I would rather advise people to sit quietly at home, if they will not go to Church, than to go or step out of doors to learn their language. I do not love a biting tongue ; and I take a black mouth to be as venemous in a man, as 'tis accounted wholsom in a dog. And if there be any printed Book with such railing speeches or phrases in them, (I will promise you) it shall never have my Imprimatur, without an Index expurgatorius in the next Edition.

Quest. Is the Divinity of the Nonconformists a Phrase-Divinity ? and in case their Books and Ser-

Sermons are not fill'd with foul language, is there any thing besides fine words, and new phrases in them?

Ans. There was something besides words in the Old Nonconformists, witness the writings of Mr. Dod, Mr. Ball, Mr. Hildersham, Mr. Bradshaw, &c. And doubtless there is matter, and that good matter and sound speech, that need not to be ashamed, in the Writings of Nonconformists of this Generation, witness the Books written by Mr. Baxter, Dr. Manton, Mr. Caryll, Mr. Allen, Dr. Owen, Mr. Pool, &c. they hold to Scripture-expressions, and to the terms of sound words, which they have received from the most serious solid pious Bishops and Doctors of the Chair, Professors at home and abroad in former times; yea, the Nonconforming-Presbyterians and Congregational Ministers profess to agree with our Articles of Religion of the Church of England, in all things concerning the Doctrine of Faith and Ceremonies: And is all this but Phrase-Divinity!

The Author of the Debate, and divers other of the present Conformists may as justly be charged for new Divinity, new minted words in Divinity, new phrases and modes of expressing themselves in Sermons and Writings, and these too less conform to the language of the holy Scripture, our own Articles and Homilies, the Harmony of Confessions of the Reformed Churches, ches, and our ancient Bishops and Doctors. The Author of the Debate, though he seems to be the Bishops Advocate, yet his Writings shew him more an Episcopian than an Episcopalian; and 'tis easie to see from what forge they have their new Divinity and new Theological Dictionary.

Quest. Were not the Nonconformists the cause of the strange and new Doctrines and Opinions, and of phantastical words and phrases in preaching and writing?

Ans. I grant the taking down the old Mound or Hedge, and not setting a new one in the room, was an occasion that many erroneous persons, like wild beasts, did get into the Vineyard, and that some strange Doctrines, Phancies, Phrases and Whimses were vented in the Times of War and late Confusions; but I say, that these things are not to be charged upon the Presbyterians: for if they had had power to their principles and purposes, they would doubtless have raised up a Mound or Fence against such Errors, Fancies and Follies, as strong as that the Parliament removed. I have heard it observed, that of all Churches, no Church hath had fewer Heresies and Heterodoxies spring up, or at least prosper in it, than the Church of Scotland, and that this was acknowledged by King James.

Quest. Were all that took the Covenant bound thereby to endeavour to introduce the Government of the Church of Scotland into England, land, because they obliged themselves to maintain and defend Religion in the Church of Scotland, and to reform Religion in the Church of England? Vid. Contin. p. 168.

Answ. No. They engaged only in their places and callings, and so far as lawfully they might to preserve Religion in the Church of Scotland against the Common Enemy, notwithstanding which the Scots might reform ought that was amiss or defective, with his Majesties leave and consent, in a legal manner. And the English Covenanters were not bound to model the Church-Government in England according to the pattern of the Kirk of Scotland, but according to the Word of God and the best Reformed Churches. Whether Scotland, or Holland, or Geneva, &c. was the best Reformed Church, was not determined. And the English were not engaged in their places and callings, and so far as lawfully they might, by the Covenant, to follow the Model of any one of these, or all the Reformed Churches, in any thing disagreeing from the Word of God; and in case a primitive Episcopacy (that is, Church-Government by a Bishop, with a Presbytery as his Counsellors and Assistants) prove most agreeable to the Word of God, they were bound to set up, (onely in their places and callings, and so far as lawfully they might) that Government in the Church of England: Notwithstanding what the Earl of Bristol, when Lord Digby,

Digby, hath written in his Letters to Sir Kenelm Digby, viz. He that would reduce the Church now, to the Form of Government in the most primitive times, should not take, in my Opinion, the best nor the wisest course, I am sure not the safest; for he would be found pecking towards the Presbytery of Scotland, which for my part I believe, in point of Government, hath a greater resemblance than yours or ours, to the first Age of Christs Church. But whatever was the meaning of the Imposers or Takers of the Covenant in those days, I have heard an eminent Person, a Doctor that had taken it, though a Nonconformist, declare, That he was not bound by it to endeavour any other Reformation than what he had been obliged unto, if he never had taken the Covenant; that he is not bound to use any unlawful or seditious means, or endeavours, to bring about a Reformation. That the Law of the Land is the Rule to judge by, what means or endeavours are unlawful and seditious.

Quest. Do not the Presbyterians play fast and loose, and turn with the wind? Was not the time once when they held Ruling Elders to be Jure Divino, but now they hold no such matter?

Answ. I believe the Scottish Presbyterians were and still are of that Judgement, that Ruling Elders are Jure Divino; but I knew few English, if any, that held that Office so, save onely in a large sence; as many Episcopalians now hold
Bishops

Bishops to be Jure Divino, that is, a lawful Government, not repugnant to the Word of God. However, 'tis said, and that by no mean Scholar, That Geneva did not first institute those Officers, but only restored them. And I have read that it was acknowledged by a great Prelate, That the Church had in every Church certain Seniors, to whom the Government of the Church was committed. Surely they are as tolerable in a Church, where the Supreme Power thinks good to establish that Order, as are Chancellors, Commissaries, &c. But in case that some Presbyterians of old, held them of use in the Apostles days, this alone (without an Institution and an Injunction to perpetuate them) doth not make them, or any other Ecclesiastical Officers, unalterable; for we see that the Office of Widdows is laid aside in the Church, notwithstanding.

Quest. Did not the Presbyterians wholly lay aside the use of the Lords Supper? And was it not for want of Ruling Elders?

Ans. They celebrated the Lords Supper in London, and that too in some Churches, once a Month; and frequently at Oxford; and I suppose in many other places: Possibly the expectation of a settlement might hinder the Administration of that Ordinance for a time in many places. But I knew a Parish where it was a long time disused, though desired, because the Parishoners did not provide (though oft urged unto

it by the Minister) decent and necessary Utensils for the Celebration of it.

Quest. Do the Nonconformists decry all use of Reason in Theology?

Answ. They use frequently Reasons in their Sermons. Indeed they allow Reason but the second place in Divinity; to Revelation they give the first. Reason and Philosophy they make to be the Handmaids, but Divinity they honour as their Sovereign Lady and Queen. Reason is the Counsellor, but Revelation is the Law-giver. We say the Light of Reason is as the Light of a Glow-Worm, or of a Candle; or (if you will needs have it) as the Light of the Moon; but the Light of Divine Revelation, is as the Light of the Sun, when it shineth in its full strength. And with a reverend and learned Doctor, we allow the use of a Candle, although we would have it snuffed; and when it is set up in the house, we would not have the Window shut, either to keep out, or at least to darken the Light of the Sun. We prefer feeding on Manna, before feeding on Acorns and Husks; the Commands of St. Paul, before the Precepts of Plato; the Mass of Gold in the Mine, before a few pieces of Silver scattered here and there in the Studies of Philosophers.

Quest. Do the Congregations of those that dissent from the established Worship, consist mostly of Army Saints?

Answ.

Answ. I have heard one that hath reason to know upon many Accounts better than the Author of the Debate, say, That there is scarce a fifth person of those that meet privately that was engaged in the late Differences. And that the greatest part of the late Army are at this day Members of Parochial Churches, is an even Wager.

Quest. Do the Arminians or Calvinists come nearest to the Doctrine of the Church of England?

Answ. The profound pious and learned Doctor Samuel Ward, that was the La. Margaret's Professor of Divinity in Cambridge, (whose Determinations are set out by the great pains and care of the Right Reverend Seth Lord Bishop of Sarisbury) in a Sermon of his Ad Clerum, and dedicated by himself to the University of Cambridge, testifies, That as the whole Church of God ever since St. Austine, so in particular the National Church of England, and the University of Cambridge from the Reformation, and all the Professors, except onely one Baro, were against Arminius his Tenets. And this Baro within two years was forced to leave the Chair, by the Power and Authority of Archbishop Whitgift.

Quest. Is the case of the Donatists and the case of the Non-conformists alike?

Answ. The Donatists, as they had no cause in regard of the Faith (by reason of any dangerous Doctrines or Practices imposed on them)
to cease from communicating with any part of the Catholick Church; so they divided from the whole Church, with the breach of Charity, condemning it for no Church, and drawing the Communion wholly to themselves. The Nonconformists do not condemn the Church of England as no Church; they do not confine the Communion to themselves; they humbly pray
a Reformation of some things which they conceive amiss, and are willing to have Communion with them as Parts of the Catholick Church (saving the Practices wherein they differ) they leave them to their Liberty, and desire a Liberty
for themselves to serve God according to their Consciences. The Presbyterians shewed their Charity in their earnest endeavours to save the life of Dr. Hewit an Episcopal Dr.; for which purpose, they joyned in an Address to O. C. the only Address they ever made unto him; Neither Presbyterians, nor Congregationists, charge the Episcopalians for being Schismatics, because they do not communicate with their Congregations, and yet they look upon themselves as true Churches of Christ, and both for Doctrine and Discipline, to come as near the Scripture-Patern as themselves. They offered to Unite and Reconcile with the Episcopal-Clergy upon Christian terms, before His Majesties Return, and since. As for our Brethren of New England, they are of Age, let them answer for themselves. As for our Congregational Brethren at home, I lately heard that Dr. Goodwin should profess to hold Communion even with the Lutheran Churches. And Dr. Owen professeth against all Impositions; and that 'tis his Judgment, That the Episcopals and Presbyterians be left to worship God as they judge in their Consciences best; That for his part, he judgeth no man for his Conformity, provided he be not a Persecuter of those that cannot.

Finally, The Presbyterians for themselves desire much rather a Reformation, or well stated Comprehension, than a Toleration; and are against Schism and Separation, truly so called, as much as any; which they have sufficiently evidenced by their constantly declared Opinions and Practice: They would be glad to see the day, when being eased of burdensome Impositions, they might have opportunity to manifest this their sincere desire of Union and Coalition with the Church of England.

A Postscript to the Author of the Friendly Debate.

S I R,

You have dealt with us, as the Jewes did with our Blessed Saviour; blindfolded us, & smitten us, & in effect bid us Prophecie who it is that smote us. Some ghosts have been who you are
by the roughness of your hand, and the smartness of the blow; I have not taken upon me thus to hoot in the dark, and yet pretend to hit the Mark. Nor will I go about to pull off the Visor you put upon your own face, but to wipe off the dirt which you have cast on ours. To this purpose I pray you, after these premised Reflections by me on some Passages in your Friendly Debate, &c. you would be pleased to reflect upon your self, and to ask your self these few Questions.

Quest. 1. Whether or no you might not with as much reason, and more charity, have produced Testimonies out of the Large Annotations, Printed in the year 1651. to clear Nonconformists from temporizing, and conniving at Sacri-
edge, as you have done the Omissions you charge them withal in the Edition of 1646, to prove them guilty. And iure I am, if you had pleased to search, you might have found in the Last Edition, their dislike of Sacrilege in their Notes on Prov. 20. 25. It is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is holy. That is, say the Annotations, to apply it, or take it to his own use, which was appointed to Gods: yea, to go about to do it by inquiring how the Vow might be made void. As also on Acts 5. 1. in the case of Ananias and Sapphira, they declare plainly and fully against Sacrilege as followeth. The scope of this History is to shew how odious to God that perfidiousness is, which counterfeiting Sanctity, would impose upon God, as if He saw not what men do; for otherwise (Ananias giving a part, had been commendable) so great a mischief is Hypocrisie, so dangerous the perversion of an Holy purpose, and the with-drawing of things Consecrated to the Churches use (though by himself who gave) that the Sacriligious perished by detaining a part of that whole which he would seem to give. — If he that taketh from the Church but a little of that which was his own, be Sacriligious & struck dead for the same what punishment will the same Divine Justice lay on him, who by fraud or violence taketh away the Possessions wherewith other men endowed the Church?

And upon Rom. 2. 22. to that Question which some make, why the Apostle doth vary the crime saying saying, Thou that abhorrest Idols, dost thou commit Sacrilege, and not rather dost thou commit Idolatry? They give this Answer for one, That the Apostle useth an aggravation, as if he should say, Thou that abhorrest Idols, dost thou commit a worse sin, to wit, Sacrilege?

Quest. 2. Whether Dr. Sherlock in his Visitation Sermon (pag. 7, 8, 9.) Preached at Warrington (May 11.) and Printed at London with an Imprimatur, June 9. 1669. charging all Conformists, who pray before and after Sermon, any Prayers besides those of the Publick Liturgy, as guilty of sacrilegiously breaking their Vows and Promises, may not as justly be urged against Conformists, as Mr. Case his Complaint against Covenant-breaking, be urged against Nonconformists, to prove them transgressors of the 3^d Commandment, in the main sense and meaning of it.

Q. 3. Whether it may not as reasonably be desired, that the Conformists should be agreed about the Rule and Standard of Conformity, before others be pressed to come up to it; as to require that the Nonconformists should be all agreed what will satisfy them before any condescensions may be desired for, or granted to them. Are the Old Canons Law, or are they not? Are the Canons made in the Synod 1640, Law or not? Must we read Second Service at the Communion Table, or must we not? Must we pray before Sermon, or must we only bid or exhort the People to Pray?

Q. 4.

Q. 4. Whether they are not to be reputed Non-conformists, who go beyond the law, & do more then is required? who use other Rites & Ceremonies, then the Act of Uniformity enjoyns, as well as those that fall short of doing some things by law required?

Q. 5. Whether it may not well become our Spiritual Fathers and Brethren of the Church, to yield a little in things indifferent to the weakness of those (suppose they be in an error) who really scruple the lawfulness of them, and who are ready to take a solemn Oath that they would Conform, if they could but be once convinced, that by their Obedience to mans Ordinances, they should not disobey the Laws of God.

Q. 6. Whether what was said, done, or Printed in times of War, ought to be remembered and produced in Evidence in times of Peace, after a most solemn Act of Oblivion and Indempnity?

Q. 7. Whether it was seasonable, when His most Excellent Majesty, and the Parliament, at the last Session, had under Consideration some Expedient for Union and Reconciliation, for a Minister of the Gospel of Peace & of a professed large Charity to Print and publish such Books as might rationally be thought might prove to be Obstructions in the way of Accommodation?

Q. 8. Whether there be not as much evidence of Charity, Modesty, Meekness and Moderation in Mr. Corbet his Two Pieces, as in the Three Parts of the Friendly Debate?

Q. 9. Why you are pleased to charge the Nonconformists with so much rigor & severity against Dissenters formerly, without remembering that the Archbishop of Armagh, and Bishop Brownrig were Publick Preachers in the Inns of Court in those times; or that the present Bishop of Worcester, then Bishop of Oxford, enjoyed a good Parsonage; and that the greatest part of the now Conformists in England, had publick Employment in those times?

Q. 10. Whether you think that the late Assembly of Divines at Westminster, whereof Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Twisse, Mr. Gattaker, Dr. Tuckney, Dr. Arrowsmith, Mr. Herle, Mr. Vines, Mr. Anthony Burgess and others were members, consisted of Persons of so inconsiderable and contemptible Parts, Piety or Learning, as is represented now a-days? And, whether the present Nonconformists, such as Dr. Owen, Mr. Baxter, Dr. Manton, Dr. Conant, Dr. Bates, Dr. Goodwin, Dr. Dillingham, &c. are really such Ignoramusses as some of your Zelots would have the world imagine them to be?

Q. 11. Whether Dr. Heylins History of Presbytery doth not wound the Reformation through the sides of the Presbyterians?

Q. 12. Whether if the Nonconformists Confessions in their Prayers, may be produced in Evidence against them, How the Sons and Daughters of the Church will appear Innocent, who are taught taught after every Commandment read by the Minister, to say and pray, Lord have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this Law?

Q. 13. Whether if His Majesty and the Parliament, would be graciously pleased to leave the use of the Three Ceremonies of our Church as indifferent, as the Canons in 1640 do the Ceremony of Bowing towards the East, or Altar; That Rule of Charity might not be still observed, namely, That those which use these Ceremonies should not despise them that use them not; and that those who use them not, condemn not those that use them?

Q. 14. Who hath thriven most and prospered best, the Spaniard with his Inquisition, or the Hollander with his Tolerations?

And now having desired you to ask your self these Questions, Give me leave to reflect upon my self too, and to consider what I have done. I say not, what I have written, I have written; but rather, if I have written any thing which shall be truly interpreted Seditious or Schismatical, or which is justly offensive to any of my Superiors, Inferiors, or Equals in Church or State, I humbly beg Pardon, and Conclude; desiring you and all my Brethren, Conformists and Non-conformists, to joyn in that good Prayer, Give Peace in our time, O Lord.
